American Architect and the Architectural Review ,1905      Mastering Inherited Bond: With God, Nature and Cosmos Anslem Rosario, This book explores the deep and often unseen connections that shape our lives It looks at relationships not just as everyday interactions but as sacred bonds that carry meaning lessons and spiritual purpose From romantic partnerships and family ties to our relationship with nature the divine and the vast cosmos every connection is seen as a mirror reflecting who we truly are The journey begins with understanding how many of our bonds are inherited through family culture and even the spiritual patterns we carry within us These bonds influence how we love trust communicate and grow By becoming aware of these patterns we gain the power to transform them and build relationships based on consciousness respect and genuine connection The book gently guides readers to see that relationships are not accidents Each bond enters our life to teach us something important Some relationships help us grow through love and support while others challenge us and reveal hidden wounds that need healing When we approach these experiences with awareness they become powerful tools for personal growth and inner awakening It also explores the sacred relationship between human beings and nature The earth the elements and the natural world are not separate from us they are part of the same living system When we reconnect with nature we rediscover balance peace and a deeper understanding of our place in the universe Read less
