Fought for the Rights of Farm Workers

Cesar Chavez was born to Mexican parents in Yuma, Arizona on March 31, 1927. He is one of many American civil rights hero known specifically for his work to secure rights for migrant farm workers many of whom were Latinos and Filipinos in California.

Chavez knew firsthand about the struggles of migrant farm workers as his own family lost their farm during the Great Depression. To find work and survive, his family had to travel to Northern California to work for other farmers.

Migrant means to move from place to place looking for work. Harvest seasons and locations of various crops dictated the jobs available. He and his siblings ended up working alongside their parents even though child labor was illegal. When state employment officials came through children would run from the fields and hide. School was not always available to migrant children, especially in the many regions his family worked. However, helping the family earn also took priority over education so Chavez only finished 8 years of school.

As Chavez grew older, he became further aware of the many injustices around him and how workers were mistreated. Living wages were not provided, and state employment laws were ignored. Workers had to pay rent to stay in work camps where often there was little shelter and food provided, with no clean water or proper bathroom facilities. People were often also separated by race, with some populations being treated better than others. Due to unsanitary conditions, disease spread easily. Work conditions were even worse with back-breaking labor and no breaks for up to ten hours of work.

At age nineteen, Chavez joined the United States Navy, enabling him to see a world outside of what he knew. When he was done serving, he went back to the only life he had known. But this time, he wanted to do something to improve the working conditions of his fellow people. In 1962, he went on to co-organize the United Farm Workers, an organization and union with Dolores Huerta, Gilbert Padilla, Larry Itliong, and Phillip Vera Cruz. Together, they fought on behalf of migrant workers for better wages and working conditions through strikes, protest marches, and public campaigns.

Cesar Chavez was inspired by the works of Gandhi and Martin Luther King Jr. in his approach to a peaceful civil rights movement. He helped to organize a huge grape boycott that lasted for five years. He also went on a hunger strike that led to President John F. Kennedy meeting with him. Finally, Chavez also organized voter drives and advocated for healthcare for migrant workers. He also pushed for the education of their children.

Over his lifetime, Chavez received many awards for his humanitarian work. In 1994, he was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Bill Clinton, the nation's highest civilian award.
