Developmental Systems Theory Donald H. Ford, Richard M. Lerner, 1992-05-30 For decades there hasn't been an integrative theory of development only theories about various developmental domains such as language acquisition, personality, and peer relations. Two leading developmentalists, Donald H. Ford and Richard M. Lerner, present the first integrative theory on human development through a synthesis of developmental contextualism and the Living Systems Framework. The authors develop a theory that examines how a person carries out transactions with their environment and through that transaction how their biological, psychological, behavioral, and environmental elements change or remain constant. They also offer important implications of Developmental Systems Theory (DST) for research implications for use in educational and clinical settings and the usefulness of DST in the formulation of social policy. By integrating the results from many research investigations into a larger framework, Developmental Systems Theory offers researchers, professionals, and students a better understanding of how multiple elements interact and shape a person's life.

Papalia, Sally Wendkos Olds, Ruth Duskin Feldman, 1998 This revised 7th edition of the text combines research and applications with real-life examples to help readers apply the material to realistic situations. It includes thorough coverage of cross-cultural topics and issues facing the disabled.

Updated and revised to reflect the new developments in the field, the Handbook of Child Psychology, Sixth Edition, contains new chapters on such topics as spirituality, social understanding, and non-verbal communication. Volume 1: Theoretical Models of Human Development, edited by Richard M. Lerner, Tufts University, explores a variety of theoretical approaches including life span, life course, socio-cultural theories, structural theories, object relations theories, and diversity and development theories. New chapters cover phenomenology and ecological systems theory, positive youth development, and religious and spiritual development.
