

AM I IN A CODEPENDENT RELATIONSHIP?

Codependent relationships are constructed around an unequal power balance that continues in a circular pattern where one person needs the other person, and that other person needs to be needed. The giver feels worthless unless they are needed by and make sacrifices for the taker, otherwise known as the enabler.

Signs of codependency include:

Having a sense of "walking on eggshells" to avoid conflict in relationships

Putting the person on a pedestal

Constantly trying to fix the other person's problems

You often cancel plans with others to spend time with your partner

Often being the one to apologize even if you have done no wrong

Going above and beyond for the other person, even if it sacrifices your well-being

Feeling the need to constantly please your loved one

You feel trapped

Feeling sorry for the other person

Feeling the need to ask permission to do anything and everything

You have trouble being alone

You have a difficult time making your own decisions

AKUA MIND & BODY

Employee Owned

You struggle with saying "no."

You have a fear of abandonment

You feel anxious when you don't hear from your partner

The Codependency Help Book Rob Watts, 2019-09-08. Do you only feel happy when your partner's needs are met? Then keep reading. In a relationship, do you think you have to sacrifice your own needs to keep peace and harmony? Do you feel scared or anxious about spending time alone? How often do you turn other people's invitations down to keep your partner happy? Probably most of the times. You are a giving person, but your own emotional needs have started to fade away in your relationship. You put your attention on comforting your partner instead of comforting yourself. One of your core beliefs is the more love I give, the more love I receive. Unfortunately, this is a misconception. Losing your identity and becoming your partner creates a dysfunctional relationship that won't last long-term. All you do is put yourself down, comparing yourself with others and losing the trust in yourself. You live for your relationship, and without your partner, you would be worthless. If you are struggling with your self-esteem and you use all your energy to take care of your partner, you are likely to be stuck in a codependent relationship. Sacrificing yourself causes stress and can lead to addiction, obesity, and other compensation behavior patterns. Constantly pleasing your partner is not only unhealthy and dysfunctional for your relationship but also for yourself. Creating and maintaining a healthy, loving relationship that can last requires some fundamental changes in yourself. In The Codependency Help Book, you'll discover what codependency is and if you are suffering from it. How to turn from people-pleaser to self-lover. The snowball effect that keeps you locked in your relationship and how to break the circle. The underlying cause of your need to take more care of others than yourself. The most common toxins in your relationship and how to get rid of them. Warning signs of stepping into a codependent relationship to never fall back into the trap. How to say goodbye if your relationship is expired. How to create a happy and fulfilling future for yourself. And much more. You are terrified of losing your partner if you give them less attention and focus more on yourself. Yet take a second and ask yourself what relationship means. In a relationship, the needs of each partner have to be equally relevant. You are there to inspire each other and grow together instead of scaring or stressing each other. Your relationship is only supposed to last if you are loved for the unique person that you are. This guide is very easy to follow that you will have success with it, even if you tried to break free several times before and failed. You'll discover tools and strategies that will give you the strength you need to feel confident instead of lonely. It's time to claim back your identity and make space for your own needs while still being a caring and supportive person. If you want to step out of your savior role and step up for yourself, then get this book right now.

Codependency Mindset - Overcome Toxic Relationships for Restoring Peace and Melody in Your Life. Thomas Frey,2019-11-28 The human mind is a masterpiece one which is defined by several factors including the things we pass through as humans Some of these things make us better while others change us for the worse In the process of getting changed for the worst we come out of these situations by totally caring about other people s problems rather than ours for survival This is not a good way to live and to be honest this is not the way things have been designed to happen Since we are in this position one thing we must do is tackle the situation rather than watch our lives fade away just because we are in a state in which we care about the feelings of another rather than ours The essence of this book is to enlighten you or should I say expand your scope of knowledge when it comes to the problem termed codependency In various chapters of this book we are going to be emphasizing on various sides of the topic codependency as well as how to overcome the problem in systematic and practical steps The life you have come to live is yours and absolutely yours and the choice to do anything should be a choice rather than an addiction The majority do not look to tackle this plague of codependency because for some it is a sacrifice for the benefit of others rather than a problem Presented in logical order this book covers critical topics like How would you know you are codependent How to End Codependency in a Relationship List of Characteristics of Codependency Comparison of High and Low Self Esteem Relationships that are vulnerable to
