

THE HISTORY OF EARLESTON

The history of Earleston is a subject of great interest to the people of the county. It is a town of great antiquity, and has been the seat of a noble family for many centuries. The first mention of it is in the Domesday Book, where it is recorded as being the property of the King. It was afterwards given to the Earl of Northumberland, and remained in his family until the death of the last Earl, when it passed to the Crown. It was then granted to the Duke of Northumberland, and remained in his family until the death of the last Duke, when it passed to the Duke of Devonshire. It is now the property of the Duke of Devonshire, and is one of the most beautiful towns in the county.

The man in the illustration is a monk, and is shown in a kneeling position, which is a common posture of prayer or devotion in monastic life. The staff he holds is a symbol of his office as a monk, and is used to support himself when walking. The illustration is a woodcut, and is one of the many illustrations in the book.
