

Commissioning and purchasing

Commissioning starts with the needs of users. It says, what are the user's needs, what are the problems that we need to address?... Then asks what are the kind of services that might address those needs and do we have the people ourselves [or] others to provide those needs and to meet those services [the strategic make or buy decision].

It then moves to a process of contracting where people are invited to bid. Then there's the process of choosing and selecting [a purchasing cycle].

Social Procurement and New Public Governance Josephine Barraket,Robyn Keast,Craig Furneaux,2015-10-23 In recent years the search for innovative locally relevant and engaging public service has become the new philosophers stone Social procurement represents one approach to maximising public spending and social value through the purchase of goods and services It has gained increasing attention in recent years as a way that governments and corporations can amplify the benefits of their purchasing power and as a mechanism by which markets for social enterprise and other third sector organisations can be grown Despite growing policy and practitioner interest in social procurement there has been relatively little conceptual or empirical thinking published on the issue Taking a critically informed approach this innovative text examines emerging approaches to social procurement within the context of New Public Governance NPG and examines the practices of social procurement across Europe North America and Australia Considering both the possibilities and limitations of social procurement and the types of value it can generate it also provides empirically driven insights into the practicalities of triple bottom line procurement the related challenges of measuring social value and the management of both the strategic and operational dimensions of procurement processes As such it will be invaluable reading for all those interested in social services public governance and social enterprise
