Designing Secretaries Participative Design Of A Word Processing System:

Designing Secretaries Enid Mumford,1983 The Routledge Companion to Practicing Anthropology and Design Jenessa Mae Spears,Christine Z Miller,2024-11-29 The Routledge Companion to Practicing Anthropology and Design provides a comprehensive overview of the history of the relationship between these two fields and their current state outlining key concepts and current debates as well as positing directions for future practice and research Bringing together original work from a diverse group of established and emerging professionals this volume joins a wider conversation about the trajectory of this transdisciplinary movement inspired by the continuing evolution of anthropology and design as they have adapted to accelerating and unpredictable conditions in arenas that span sectors economies socio cultural groups and geographies It homes in on both the growing convergence and tensions between them while exploring how individuals from both fields have found ways of mixing experimenting and evolving theory and new forms of practice highlighting the experimental theories and practices their transdisciplinarity has generated The Routledge Companion to Practicing Anthropology and Design is a valuable reference tool for practitioners scholars and upper level students in the fields of anthropology and design as well as related disciplines Readings in Groupware and Computer-supported Cooperative Work Ronald M. Baecker,1993 This comprehensive introduction to the field represents the best of the published literature on groupware and computer supported cooperative work CSCW The papers were chosen for their breadth of coverage of the field their clarity of expression and presentation their excellence in terms of technical innovation or behavioral insight their historical significance and their utility as sources for further reading sourcebook to the field development or purchase of groupware technology as well as for researchers and managers groupware and human computer interaction Organizational Behaviour and the Physical Environment Oluremi B. Ayoko,Neal M Ashkanasy,2019-06-27 This book looks at how the physical environment of work shapes organizational behaviour demonstrating that our physical surroundings at work can have a big influence on employee productivity performance and wellbeing Drawing upon the latest research Organizational Behaviour and the Physical Environment provides comprehensive coverage of the different aspects of the physical environment at work the buildings furnishings equipment lighting air quality and their configurations From theories of psychological ownership and work design to cultural issues and technology in the workplace its international range of contributors provide voices from Australasia North America Europe and the Middle East This book will be invaluable supplementary reading for advanced students researchers and practitioners across the fields of organizational behaviour HRM organizational and environmental psychology and workspace design Technology, Economic Growth and the Labour Process Phil Blackburn,Rod Coombs,Kenneth Green,1985-06-18 New Office Information Technology Richard J. Long,2018-03-26 This book originally published in 1987 evaluates the human and managerial implications of new office information technology based on the actual experiences of organisations using the new technology A variety of issues are examined including those centred on the role of the manager productivity unemployment physical and mental health Major emphasis is placed on describing and discussing the implementation of new technology and ways of utilization which maximise benefits

The Management Implications of New Information Technology Nigel F. Piercy, 2018-04-09 This book originally published in 1984 established the need for a strategic managerial response to the new technology which relies on an understanding of the real effects of technology on organisational structure management style and employee relations It assesses the impact of the new information technology on manufacturing systems employment levels and types industrial relations and finally on marketing and external relationships

CSCW, 1990 Whitaker's Cumulative Book List, 1984 British Books in Print, 1985 Proceedings of ... Annual Meeting of the Canadian Industrial Relations Association Canadian Industrial Relations Association. Meeting, 1987 New Information Technologies and Office Employment Nicole Mandon, 1988 Based on 17 case studies in European Community countries and a literature review this research project derives several findings some of them contradictory about the evolution of qualifications related to office technology The population studied was office technology users below the executive level The project found that the impact of the new information technologies NITs is dependent on the following factors technical characteristics and possible applications the economic context that produces the objectives or expected results the organizational set up and finally an important factor the methods of human resource management and the behavior of the individual and professional groups concerned The research is organized in three chapters The first chapter shows how technology applications the context and the occupational categories have evolved since the 1960s and how the daily experience of NITs has brought about new concepts of information and changes in patterns of behavior and roles The second chapter shows how occupational activity has had to redefine its content and cope with a rearrangement of jobs especially jobs in the banking insurance and secretarial sectors The options offered by the present are highlighted in the last chapter A 177 item bibliography arranged by country is included

Information Systems Management in Practice Barbara Canning McNurlin, Ralph H. Sprague, 1989 British Paperbacks in Print, 1984 Directions and Implications of Advanced Computing, 1992 British Reports, Translations and Theses British Library. Host Bibliographic Record for Boundwith Item Barcode 30112033097202 and Others, 2013 Gender, Expertise and Information Technology Marja Vehviläinen, 1997 Abstract This book explores the interwoven construction of gender expertise and information technology by starting from three positions of information systems development in Finland male computing pioneers autobiographical accounts women developers oral histories and an office workers study circle with related interviews and fourthly from the codes of ethics of international computing professionals associations ACM and IFIP By applying Dorothy Smith's theory of conceptual practices of power information technology is understood as textuality in which texts e.g. programs professional journals and electronic messages are produced and interpreted through people's particular practices and by using particular knowledges of information technology Both practices and knowledges the expertise of information technology are organized within materially based social relations Gender intertwines with information technology through social practices Gender is studied on the level of social often textually mediated relations in terms of gendering hierarchies and divisions of labour but also inspired by Donna Haraway at the level of subjectivity in terms of definitions of information technology made by subjects The second major aim of this work is to participate in the development of methodologies on gender and technology research The study pays attention to persistently male tendencies of information technology but it looks for spaces available for women as well The computing professions inherited strict gender hierarchies from the punched card systems of the 1950s and those were strengthened by fraternities of former army acquaintances in everyday practices of systems development in public worlds of professional journals and associations as well as within images of identity In this setting the view of male experts and managers gained a status of objective truth In the 1970s and 1980s the ideas of flexible management and work design made space for participatory approaches towards systems design At the same time large numbers of women entered information technology professions in Finland Yet that view of objective truth has not been thoroughly challenged and there has been little room for textualities developed from women s or any other particular groups standpoints within information technology expertise People such as office workers can develop technologies based on their everyday life situations and this is a real opportunity for challenging both the gendering and the expertise of technology However the work done in particular settings does not translate to publicly available textuality

Gendered Practices Boel Berner,1997 Technology has the power to shape lives identities and futures Experiences of technology vary however between women and men Gender profoundly influences how technology is created used and changed The essays in this book discuss gendered practices in a wide range of technologies and technical milieus Various sociotechnical arenas where definitions of masculinity and femininity are constituted enacted or put on display are explored work places schools museums and homes The authors examine feminist political practices to influence technical change as well as recent efforts to reconceptualize the relationships between gender and technology
