Critical Issues In Asian Development:

Critical Issues in Asian Development Muhammad Ghulam Quibria,1995 Focusing on Asia site of the world s most dynamic economies Critical Issues in Asian Development brings new insights to long standing debates in development economies and international trade theory The book s ten contributors each a leading authority in the field clearly and succinctly address themes relevant both to the countries of Asia and the rest of the developing world Environmental preservation and sustainable development are the topics of the chapter by Partha Dasgupta who analyzes the impacts on the natural environment of market and government failures and entrenched poverty Robert Repetto continues with a discussion of related dynamics as he considers the influences of trade liberalization on sustainable development ERD Working Paper Series ,2002

Why Are Some Countries Richer Than Others? Jesus Felipe,2008-10 Provides evidence of a problem with the influential testing and assessment of Solow s 1956 growth model proposed by Mankiw et al 1992 and a series of papers evaluating the latter First the assumption of a common rate of technical progress maintained by Mankiw et al 1992 is relaxed Solow s model is extended to include the different levels and rates of technical progress of each country This increases the explanatory power of the cross country variation in income capital of the OECD countries to over 80% The estimates of the parameters are statistically significant and take the expected values and signs Second the estimates merely reflect a statistical artifact This has serious implications for the possibility of actually testing Solow s growth model Illus

Challenges of International Law in the Asian Region Vitit Muntarbhorn,2021-06-14 This book provides an innovative outlook of the various challenges of international law in the Asian region Moving away from the Eurocentrism prevalent in the literature on the subject it provides a comprehensive Asian perspective without adopting a monolithic or homogeneous Asian approach Although Asian countries converge on certain issues related to international law such as engagement with the United Nations at times there is a significant divergence such as in the case of agricultural trade liberalisation Given the vastness of the region and the differing political systems there are many discrepancies to consider The book takes into account the viewpoint of civil society so as to avoid a vertical state centred approach Offering an easy to understand presentation of key issues concerning the region this book is a useful introduction to this complex topic for students academics and practitioners of international law

Measuring Willingness to Pay for Electricity Peter Choynowski,2008-05 The measurement of willingness to pay for electricity relies critically on a reliable estimate of the demand for electricity function Empirical work tends to assume that the demand for electricity has no satiation point Many electricity demand models assume a constant price elasticity which implies infinite demand at low prices This report proposes a plausible functional form for the demand of electricity The proposed functional form is consistent with two properties of electricity demand functions for households firms namely the negative relationships between price quantity the finiteness of demand at zero price The report also demonstrates that this functional form of the demand function leads to easily estimable economic benefits of electricity Challenges for Asia's Trade and Environment Douglas H. Brooks,1998

Asian Development: Problems and Prognosis John H. Badgley,1971 The future Asian milieu Development and security policy Future Asian conflict situations The conceptual problem in Southeast Asian development How Can Cambodia, Lao PDR, Myanmar, and Viet Nam Cope with Revenue Lost Due to AFTA Tariff Reductions? Kanokpan Lao-Araya,2008-12 In joining the Assoc of Southeast Asian Nations ASEAN and ASEAN Free Trade Area Cambodia Lao PDR Myanmar and Viet Nam have agreed to comply with the Common Effective Preferential Tariff CEPT Scheme which reduces intra ASEAN tariff rates on certain imports and may reduce gov t revenue This study proposes tax structure and tax admin reforms and other policies that can be introduced to enhance revenue collection They can Strategically allocate goods among the four CEPT scheme lists Improve their tax systems by replacing traditional general sales taxes with Value Added Tax Reduce inefficiencies that impede tax collection and Discourage tax avoidance and evasion and reduce corruption among tax officials Role of Infrastructure in Land-Use Dynamics and Rice Production in Viet Nam's Mekong River Delta Christopher Edmonds,2008-06 Examines the role of infrastructure development and technical change in explaining increases in agricultural production and changes in land use in the Mekong Delta Region of Viet Nam during the mid 1990s The transportation costs involved in moving agricultural input and output between farms and markets significantly effect farm land use and production decisions Greater transport costs reduce the likelihood that farms adopt intensive cropping patterns or cultivate non rice crops Results suggest that the quality of local water management infrastructure is much more important than transport costs in explaining the increased intensity of land use and level of production observed in the Mekong Delta during the 1990s Illustrations An Analysis and Case Study of the Role of Environmental Economics at the Asian Development Bank David Donald Dole,P. Abeygunawardena,2002 Framework for Establishing Priorities in a Country Poverty Reduction Strategy Ron Duncan,2008-05 This paper reviews the history progress of understanding development theory over the past 50 years Development thinking has evolved from an early paradigm that focused on savings capital investment to subsequent arguments favoring the inclusion of human capital policy technical change finally to the inclusion of the role of institutions good governance Secure property rights in the broadest sense which are applicable to all resources not just land are particularly important to realize investment yield This evolution of development thought describes a conceptual framework that can guide development practitioners in prioritizing sequencing characterizing all interventions aimed at reducing poverty European Social Model Assar Lindbeck,2008-06 Developing countries esp the least developed ones have more to learn from social policies in Europe during the early 20th cent than from the elaborate welfare state arrangements after WW2 In addition to macro economic growth and stability the main ambitions must be to fight human deprivation incl illiteracy malnutrition and poor access to water and sanitation in some cases also weak incompetent and or corrupt governments Informal systems in the fields of transfers and social services must not be destroyed

when developing countries embark on more formal systems The European experience also warns against the creation of social systems that are so generous that disincentives and receding social norms distort the national economy

Foreign Direct Investment in Developing Asia Douglas H. Brooks, Emma Xiaoqin Fan, Lea R. Sumulong, 2003 Foreign direct investment FDI flows have increased dramatically in recent decades As developing countries particularly in Asia remove restrictions and implement policies to attract FDI inflows trade and investment have become increasingly intertwined As such there have been growing calls for a multilateral framework of foreign investment rules to be negotiated under the auspices of the World Trade Organization WTO This paper reviews recent developments in FDI flows and their impacts in developing Asia and the importance of the policy context in which those flows occur It discusses advantages and disadvantages of including FDI in WTO negotiations and related policy options for developing Asian economies

Liberalization, Growth, and the Asian Financial Crisis Mohamed Ariff, Ahmed M. Khalid, 2000 This timely book examines the effects of financial liberalization in the more advanced economies of Southeast Asia The book also analyses the degree to which emerging and transitional economies in East and South Asia can benefit from this example The weakness of the banking sector is examined in order to explain the reasons behind the currency crisis and to prescribe policies to avoid a similar episode in the future Further the book documents the individual steps taken to liberalize the economies over a period of about 20-30 years in each country The analyses reveal that liberalization led to high growth in economies undertaking such reforms while unwillingness to take such reforms appear to have led to poor growth and hence low social development This finding contradicts the common belief that liberalization led to the financial crisis and then to growth collapse An efficient and liberalized financial sector is an essential precondition for promoting and accelerating economic growth and welfare Arguments supporting this policy are based on the experience of Southeast Asian economies particularly the pioneers such as Malaysia Singapore Indonesia and Thailand This has led some less developed countries in East and South Asia to initiate the process of financial sector reforms and to realize the potential benefits of such reforms The authors analyse the reform process and the lessons to be drawn from the experiences of these economies in their quest for sustained development in East and South Asia

Technological Spillovers from Foreign Direct Investment Emma Xiaoqin Fan, 2002

Poverty and Patterns of Growth Rana Hasan, 2002 With reference to East Asia

Electricity Demand in the People's Republic of China Bo Qiang Lin, 2003 This paper uses a macroeconomic approach to develop a long run electricity demand model to analyze the main factors affecting electricity demand in the People's Republic of China PRC As expected the relationship among variables is more stable and significant after the PRC's economic reforms 1978 when all factors were more responsive to market forces An error correction model provides an appropriate framework for forecasting the short run fluctuations in aggregate electricity demand The demand elasticity of gross domestic product GDP is estimated at about 0.8 after the 1978 economic reforms lower than that of the pre reform period before 1978 The results show that although GDP is still the most important factor for electricity demand electricity demand is negatively related to structural changes and efficiency improvement This implies that in a fast growing economy such as the PRC high GDP growth does not always come with high electricity demand and explains why in 1998 when the PRC had an economic growth rate of 7.8 percent electricity consumption grew by only 2.8 percent To meet the forecasted demand growth the total install capacity incremental is estimated to be 187 GW between 2002-2010 while the required investment costs are estimated to be US 193 billion in 2002 prices The continued growth of coal fired power plants will increase the share of the power sector in total sulfur dioxide emission from 50 percent in 2001 to 53 percent in 2005 Asian Development Bank, Country Strategy and Program, 2006-2010, Bangladesh, 2005

Research Bulletin Asian Development Bank, 1993 The Political Economy of Good Governance for Poverty Alleviation Policies Narayan Lakshman, 2003 The motivation of this research paper is to shed light upon the political economy factors that determine the quality of governance for poverty alleviation policies This issue is a crucial one because although remarkable strides have been made in some parts of the world more than 2.8 billion people live on less than 2 a day The situation begs the important question Why have poverty alleviation efforts by developing countries not achieved the momentum necessary to improve the living standards of poor An important reason why growth with significant redistribution has not occurred in many developing countries is that poverty reduction strategies have often been politically naive The literature spawned by major development institutions until the 1980s did not go beyond policy prescriptions to ask under what political conditions redistributive policies could be successfully adopted This is a relevant issue because policies reflect concrete political and social interests and it is not hard to imagine a situation where poverty alleviating reform is hindered by vested interests The aim of this research paper is to shed light upon the factors determining quality of governance because poor governance is but a manifestation of these deep rooted institutional and political biases against the collective interests of the poor
