Young, 2013-06-29 This volume proposes a theoretical integration of several major streams in contemporary psychological theory about adult development and therapy It adopts the perspective that there are steps in development throughout the adult period and that they are characterized by a union of the cognitive and affective the self and the other and idea with idea in second order collective abstractions That is they are at once postformal in terms of Piaget s theory sociocultural in terms of Vygotsky s theory and postmodern with the latter perspective providing an integrating theme The affirmative multivoiced contextual relational other sensitive side of postmodernism is emphasized. Levinas's philosophy of responsibility for the other is seen as congruent with this ethos. The neo-Piagetian model of development on which the current approach is based proposes that the last stage in development concerns collective intelligence or postmodern postformal thought. Kegan (1994) has attempted independently to describe adult development from the same perspective. His work on the development of the postmodern mind of the adult is groundbreaking and impressive in its depth. However, I analyze the limitations as well as the contributions of his approach under scoring the advantages of my particular model.
