dog's brain. What goes through their mind when they're introduced to new people or other pets? It's so interesting to witness such intelligent creatures they know to bring you their leash when they want to be walked around the neighborhood and how to get your attention if they need a potty break or even if they want a treat. Dogs know and adhere to our cues and commands like a first language in some cases. It's pretty incredible how much dogs and humans have learned to understand each other over the centuries. It's no wonder why our four-pawed furry friends are referred to as Man's Best Friend. They want to be by our side and we want to be by theirs. Almost 80 percent of dog owners would give their life for their pets. Many of us consider our pups to be our children or part of our family so much so that even the law recognizes dogs as family. You can find the study of dog psychology and cognitive abilities dating back as far as 1964. Since its conception there have been numerous studies in this field expanding the mysterious and beautiful topic of a dog's brain innerworkings. In an article published in the New York Post of 2000, pet owners 42% polled that household messes, bad behaviors, and messy antics are the #1 reason for giving away their pets. Other key factors are attributed to boredom or just needing physical or mental stimulation according to Dr. Lisa Lippman, lead veterinarian at Fuzzy Pet Health. Luckily for us, dog psychology is well researched and is key in guiding anyone, yes even you, on the sensational and mysterious journey of a dog's mind. In The Mind of Your Dog, you'll discover how to keep your dog calm, occupied, and content while you're away during the day. The traits of specific dog breeds and personalities. How your dog talks back to you. The dog and human relationship and how we benefit one another. Understand the world from a dog's perception. And much more. To benefit and guarantee the Human and Dog relationship, aspirations for future triumphs, and bonding years of scientific training methods have been developed by studying the brains and psychology of dogs that has made this venture much easier to follow. Let's ensure you don't miss out on this great opportunity in unveiling the regal secrets of your dog's mind. simply scroll up and click the Add to Cart button now.

Machines like Us Ronald J. Brachman, Hector J. Levesque, 2023-10-17. How we can create artificial intelligence with broad, robust, common sense rather than narrow, specialized expertise. It's sometime in the not-so-distant future and you send your fully autonomous self-driving car to the store to pick up your grocery order. The car is endowed with as much capability as an artificial intelligence agent can have programmed to drive better than you do. But when the car encounters a traffic light stuck on red, it just sits there indefinitely. Its obstacle avoidance, lane following, and route calculation capacities are all irrelevant it fails to act because it lacks the common sense of a human driver who would quickly figure out what's happening and find a workaround In Machines like Us Ron Brachman and Hector Levesque both leading experts in AI consider what it would take to create machines with common sense rather than just the specialized expertise of today's AI systems Using the stuck traffic light and other relatable examples Brachman and Levesque offer an accessible account of how common sense might be built into a machine They analyze common sense in humans explain how AI over the years has focused mainly on expertise and suggest ways to endow an AI system with both common sense and effective reasoning Finally they consider the critical issue of how we can trust an autonomous machine to make decisions identifying two fundamental requirements for trustworthy autonomous AI systems having reasons for doing what they do and being able to accept advice Both in the end are dependent on having common sense
