Citizens Minds:

Mind the Gap Kris Deschouwer, 2019-01-19 Mind the Gap is a book on the difficult times of modern representative democracy and on the way in which political science is trying to make sense of it Forecasting election results has become a very risky business and explaining the often surprising results must increasingly rely on case by case ad hoc interpretations Old and formerly stable political parties now appear to be very vulnerable because many of their traditional voters seem willing to desert them If voters turn out to vote at all they tend to be very volatile and send out complex messages to decide later than ever what to do in the polling booth to react to short term factors and to follow candidates rather than parties Low levels of trust in political actors and institutions reveal a gap between the elites and the people Belgium is one of the countries where one can witness these debates Yet Belgium is also a special case Not only a gap between elites and citizens but also a gap between north and south animates the political debates The territorial division of the country in two language groups has led to the complete split of the parties and the party system and to the transformation of the unitary state into a complex federal system With on top of all that the European level the lines of representation and accountability in Belgium are extremely opaque Decision making requires subtle compromises between party leaders and sometimes take a very long time to come about Voting in Belgium is however compulsory which means that exiting the scene of democratic representation is not an obvious option Citizens do turn out to vote and do express their views and their discontent Some political parties however do suggest that leaving Belgium behind altogether might be better than just muddling through This book is based on ten years of research on political participation and representation in Belgium by the interuniversity research team PartiRep Using several surveys among the population and politicians voting aid applications focus groups and experiments it draws a picture of a parliamentary and representative democracy that faces multiple tensions and multiple gaps It discusses a wide range of political processes and actors placing them in a comparative perspective and exploring to what extent the Belgian case fits into the general picture The chapters of the book deal with political socialization political parties representation economic voting preference voting and personalized voting democratic preferences identity politics and campaign effects and on the way in which elites and citizens try to find their way and make sense of this complex multi level and linguistically divided country in the heart of the European Union The Liberator, 1908 United States Zero JUMA FREDRICK O., 2024-10-19 The United States Zero also referred to as US Zero throughout the book takes readers into a chilling dystopia where technological advancement has come at the ultimate cost humanity itself In a society driven by mechanical perfection where emotions are obsolete and individuality is a liability the citizens of US Zero live without questioning the system Here the ideal form is sleek and efficient a robot body with no need for the messiness of human feelings or frailty Those who resist who cling to their biological roots are outcasts relics of a past the world has discarded In this stark new world human meat is a delicacy children are engineered in artificial wombs and the gladiator arenas provide brutal entertainment The streets are a symphony of order and control but beneath the surface the remnants of human emotion love fear hope still linger in the shadows As the narrative unfolds US Zero explores the deepest questions of existence What does it mean to be human Can a society truly evolve when it strips away everything that makes life meaningful And is there a future for those who refuse to conform In this gripping novel the outcasts fight not only for survival but for the very soul of humanity itself while the mechanical citizens begin to realize that their flawless world is a cage they never saw coming Tense thought provoking and deeply poignant US Zero challenges readers to confront the dangers of a world where progress means abandoning what makes us human By JUMA FREDRICK O Mind and Body ,1908 The Ontological Foundation of Ethics, Politics, and Law Francesco Belfiore,2013-03-25 The revised edition of The Ontological Foundation of Ethics Politics and Law adds new concepts and discusses the views of additional thinkers The author refers to his basic ontological conception of the human mind or spirit as an evolving conscious triadic entity composed of intellect sensitivity and power each exerting a bidirectional selfish and moral activity Through this approach the notions of good morality society and law are derived from the structure and functioning of the mind It follows that the solutions presented are the results of a discovery and not the consequence of a choice Otherwise stated ethics politics and law are given an ontological foundation For each topic considered Belfiore shows how his thought can reinterpret the views of other philosophers This new edition enriched in concepts and quotations appears as an innovative and highly stimulating contribution to the philosophical branches of ethics politics and law and will be of interest to both graduate students and philosophy scholars Changing Presidential Approval through Democratization in Mexico Ricardo R.
