Respecting Toleration Peter Balint, 2017 The question of toleration matters more than ever The politics of the twenty first century is replete with both the successes and all too often the failures of toleration Yet a growing number of thinkers and practitioners have argued against toleration Some believe that liberal democracies are better served by different principles such as respect of or recognition for people's ways of life. Others argue that because the liberal state should be entirely neutral or indifferent towards people's ways of life it can no longer be tolerant; it has no grounds on which it can object and so there is nothing left to tolerate. Respecting Toleration provides a new original and provocative take on the question of toleration and its application to the politics of contemporary diversity. Peter Balint argues for both the conceptual coherence and normative desirability of toleration and neutrality. He argues that it is these principles which best realise the basic liberal good of people living their lives as they see fit rather than appealing to principles of recognition or respect for difference. While those who criticised liberalism's failings in dealing with the claims of diversity had justification, it is the tenets of traditional liberalism that hold the answer. Respecting Toleration argues that if one cares about people living divergent lives then it is liberal toleration that should be respected by legislators and policy makers and not people's differences.

Ethical Eating in the Postsocialist and Socialist World Yuson Jung, Jakob A. Klein, Melissa L. Caldwell, 2014-02-21. Current discussions of the ethics around alternative food movements, concepts such as local, organic and fair trade tend to focus on their growth and significance in advanced capitalist societies. In this groundbreaking contribution to critical food studies, editors Yuson Jung, Jakob A. Klein and Melissa L. Caldwell explore what constitutes ethical food and ethical eating in socialist and formerly socialist societies. With essays by anthropologists, sociologists and geographers, this politically nuanced volume offers insight into the origins of alternative food movements and their place in today's global economy. Collectively, the essays cover discourses on food and morality, the material and social practices surrounding production, trade and consumption, and the political and economic power of social movements in Bulgaria, China, Cuba, Lithuania, Russia and Vietnam. Scholars and students will gain important historical and anthropological perspective on how the dynamics of state-market-citizen relations continue to shape the ethical and moral frameworks guiding food practices around the world.
