

Research methodology – case study

- A qualitative research approach was chosen to explore a phenomenon unfamiliar to us and analysing it from the rather immature and unestablished agile software development point of view
- When studying agile in-house software development, empirical case study was used to thoroughly describe and analyse a corporate venture and its development methods
 - The purpose of our case study was to find answers to a question: "how do agile methods support the principles of Agile Manifesto when using in-house software development methods?"
