Defining Alternative Education Karen Junko, 2005 Alternative education has been around for many years During the 1980s alternative schools gained momentum and became firmly established in public school districts Today alternative education is seen as a means of addressing the needs of youth for whom the traditional high school program is not being effective In Iowa there are ninety eight alternative schools serving over 10 000 students School districts that establish alternative education programs particularly at the high school level have little guidance on how to develop an effective program that will meet the needs of the students and increase their academic achievement The Iowa Association of Alternative Education IAAE developed a system called The Framework for Learning Alternatives Environment in Iowa This framework includes twelve components of a quality alternative education program each component has a number of quality indicators that should be present in any alternative educational program in order for it to affect student achievement and success The study was conducted at Crusade High Alternative School which services four school districts in southeast Iowa The research question guiding the study was the extent to which the participants in this school teachers students and the director perceive that the quality indicators are present and manifested in four specific components philosophy curriculum and instruction staff and student Participants in the study included all three staff members and six students All participants completed a survey This survey included the components of philosophy curriculum and instruction staff and students and the quality indicators within each component In addition the researcher conducted interviews with the staff and students completed an observation in the school and collected and reviewed appropriate documents such as the student handbook The results of the data collection showed some triangulation between the participants researcher's observations and documents collected To meet triangulation evidence had to be provided by all of the above components A little less than half 46% of the total number of indicators were considered triangulated by the data 16 out of 35 The results from this study are a beginning and further research is encouraged

Alternative Educational Programmes, Schools and Social Justice Glenda McGregor, Martin Mills, Pat Thomson, Jodie Pennacchia, 2019-10-18 Alternative education caters and cares for students whose regular schools have failed and excluded them Fifty years of international research reports that alternative settings are characterised by close and powerful staff student relationships a curriculum which is relevant engaging and meaningful and the strong sense of agency afforded young people by the opportunity to make decisions Together these three practices produce increased life chances for alternative education participants However despite these apparent successes alternative education seems to have had little impact on mainstream schools This collection of papers addresses the important question what might regular schools and teachers learn about socially just pedagogies from alternative education practices In providing answers to this question authors interrogate the taken for granted wisdom about alternative education while also taking account of ongoing policy shifts differing locations and populations and persistent and intersecting patterns of raced classed and gendered inequalities They draw on a range of theoretical and methodological approaches to interrogate the ways in which alternative schools and alternative education both challenge and legitimate the kinds of schooling most of us expect for our own and other people s children The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Critical Studies in Education
