

An aerial photograph showing a road completely covered in a thick layer of trash and debris. In the upper portion of the image, a large, light-colored, circular object, possibly a piece of metal or plastic, is prominent. Below it, a white car is partially visible, surrounded by various pieces of litter. The road's lane markings are barely discernible through the sea of trash. The overall scene depicts a state of extreme environmental neglect and pollution.

Barriers To Riches:

Barriers to Riches Stephen L. Parente, Edward C. Prescott, 2002-01-25 Why isn't the whole world as rich as the United States? Conventional views hold that differences in the share of output invested by countries account for this disparity. Not so, say Stephen Parente and Edward Prescott. In Barriers to Riches, Parente and Prescott argue that differences in Total Factor Productivity (TFP) explain this phenomenon. These differences exist because some countries erect barriers to the efficient use of readily available technology. The purpose of these barriers is to protect industry insiders with vested interests in current production processes from outside competition. Were this protection stopped, rapid TFP growth would follow in the poor countries and the whole world would soon be rich. Barriers to Riches reflects a decade of research by the authors on this question. Like other books on the subject, it makes use of historical examples and industry studies to illuminate potential explanations for income differences. Unlike these other books, however, it uses aggregate data and general equilibrium models to evaluate the plausibility of alternative explanations. The result of this approach is the most complete and coherent treatment of the subject to date.

Building Blocks for Barriers to Riches Narayana Rao Kocherlakota, 2001 Building Blocks for Barriers to Riches Narayana Kocherlakota, 2008 Total factor productivity (TFP) differs greatly across countries. In this paper, I provide a novel rationalization for these differences. I consider two environments: one in which enforcement is full and the other in which enforcement is limited. In both settings, manufactured goods can be produced using a high TFP technology or a low TFP technology; there is a fixed cost associated with adoption of the former. I suppose that the fixed cost is sufficiently small that adoption takes place in a symmetric Pareto optimum in the limited enforcement setting. Under this condition, I prove two results: First, adoption takes place in all Pareto optima in the full enforcement setting. Second, adoption may not take place in a Pareto optimum in the limited enforcement setting if the division of social surplus is sufficiently unequal. I conclude that limited enforcement and high inequality interact to create particularly strong barriers to riches in the language of Parente and Prescott (1999, 2000).

Essays on Barriers to Growth, Strategic Behavior and Uncertainty Igor Livshits, 2002 Long-Run Growth Forecasting Stefan Bergheim, 2008-03-29 This book explores how to set up an empirical model that helps with forecasting long-term economic growth. GDP forecasts for the years 2006 to 2020 for 40 countries are derived in a transparent way. Offering a systematic approach to models of potential GDP that can also be used for forecasts of more than a decade, it fills the wide gap between the high demand for such models by banks, international organizations, and governments on the one hand and the limited supply on the other. Frequent forecast failures in the past (e.g., Japan 1990, Asia 1997) and the heavy economic losses they produced motivated the work. The book assesses the large number of theories of economic growth, the drivers of economic growth, the available datasets, and the empirical methods on offer. A preference is shown for evolutionary models and an augmented Kaldor model. The book uses non-stationary panel techniques to find pair-wise cointegration among GDP per capita and its main correlates.

The Triumph of the Flexible

Society Manuel Hinds, 2003-11-30 Hinds takes offers a fresh perspective on the social political and economic disturbances now affecting our world This book looks at those disturbances not as separate problems but rather as the coherent symptoms of a deep technological revolution that is changing the shape of society on the scale of the Industrial Revolution the Connectivity Revolution the basis of the New Economy Analyzing the resistance to change that erupted violently in response to that last major economic upheaval Hinds shows how Communism Nazism and fundamentalism owe their triumphs not to the prevalence of poverty or oppression but to the rigidity of societies threatened by profound social changes prompted by rapid technological progress Demonstrating that their rigidity was caused by the same kind of state intervention in the economy that is now being proposed to stop globalization he argues persuasively that only a horizontal flexible society can smoothly manage change in such a way that the pain of transformation and therefore the risk of giving birth to new varieties of destructive regimes is minimized The American Federationist ,1922 Includes separately paged Junior union section

Competition, Innovation and Growth with Limited Commitment Ramon Marimon, Vincenzo Quadrini, 2006 We study how barriers to competition such as restrictions to business start up and strict enforcement of covenants or IPR affect the investment in knowledge capital when contracts are not enforceable These barriers lower the competition for human capital and reduce the incentive to accumulate knowledge We show in a dynamic general equilibrium model that this mechanism has the potential to account for significant cross country income inequality A Unified Theory of the Evolution of Income Levels Stephen L.
