

HAZARD COMMUNICATION PLAN Tips and Considerations

Applicability. This sample Hazard Communication (HazCom) Plan applies to employers that use hazardous chemicals. “Use” in the context of hazard communication means to package, handle, react (such as introduce into a process), or transfer. Employers that store and use chemicals but do not produce or import them do not have to comply with the requirement to classify the hazards of those chemicals; they will receive that information from the manufacturer or importer on labels and safety data sheets (SDSs).

Chemical manufacturers and importers must follow the hazard classification requirements at 29 CFR 1910.1200, Appendices A and B, in addition to a written HazCom plan for their employees.

Laboratories that produce or mix chemicals must meet the same requirements for the classification of hazards as chemical manufacturers and importers.

Laboratories where employees handle only chemicals in sealed containers are not required to maintain a written HazCom program.

HazCom Plan and GHS amendments. OSHA’s Hazard Communication Standard is aligned with the provisions of the United Nation’s Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labeling of Chemicals, or GHS.

Required elements of a written Plan. The written Plan does not have to be long or spell out your program in detail, but it must be well thought out, clear, and comprehensive, at least outlining all the parts of the program you are implementing. The written plan is the first thing a compliance officer or inspector will ask to see. Following are the essential elements of the written program that a regulatory inspector will seek:

- How the requirements for labels and other forms of warning will be met
- How the requirements for SDSs will be met
- How employee information and training requirements will be met
- List of hazardous chemicals known to be present in the workplace that includes a product identifier (common name or number) for each chemical that is referenced on the appropriate SDS
- How hazards of nonroutine tasks will be addressed
- How the employer will inform employees about chemical hazards in unlabeled pipes
- How HazCom will be handled in a multiemployer workplace situation (i.e., multiemployer worksites)

Access to the written plan. The written plan must be readily available to employees and their designated representatives, OSHA, or applicable state agency inspectors, and representatives of the Director of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH).

SDS access system. Describe the process for accessing SDSs, including, if applicable, how to access the electronic SDS file system or other off-site SDS retrieval service. The description must include the person(s) responsible for obtaining and maintaining the SDSs, how they are accessed and maintained in the workplace, procedures to follow when the SDS has not been received, and a description of alternatives to obtaining SDS information (the backup system). If the company has a written HazCom plan that adequately describes the SDS access policy, and
