Autonomy And Power:

The Legal Adaptation Power in China's Ethnic Autonomous Areas WU Jingjing, CHENG Le, TAO

Chenchen, 2025-05-26 The book provides a comprehensive analysis of legal adaptation mechanisms within ethnically diverse regions. This scholarly work examines how legal systems are modified to accommodate the unique cultural, social, and historical contexts of ethnic autonomous areas while maintaining national legal cohesion. The book explores the theoretical foundations of legal adaptation power, analyzing its constitutional principles, including regional ethnic autonomy, ethnic equality, and popular sovereignty. It traces the historical evolution of legal adaptation in China and examines current practices across various domains, including civil code, criminal law, electoral law, and family planning regulations. The authors identify several challenges in implementing legal adaptation, including geographical imbalances, inconsistent application, and institutional deficiencies. They propose a framework for improvement, focused on strengthening legislative awareness, enhancing professional quality, and establishing effective accountability mechanisms. The work makes a significant contribution by emphasizing how legal adaptations help guarantee equal rights for ethnic minorities, resolve conflicts between national policies and local customs, and promote economic and social development. It advocates for a balanced approach that respects ethnic characteristics while maintaining the principle of national legal uniformity, ultimately supporting a more responsive and inclusive legal system in ethnic autonomous regions.

Individualisation at Work

Norbert Ebert, 2016-05-23 Individualisation has become an ambiguous but defining feature of late modern societies, and while it is in part characterised by an increase in individual autonomy and a sense of liberation, individuals are equally required to negotiate a fragmented, pluralised, and ambiguous social order by themselves. This book sheds light on the processes and nature of contemporary individualisation, specifically exploring the manner in which it unfolds under conditions of contemporary network capitalism. With attention to the modern workplace where the individual and the organisation meet directly but also in the wider community, Individualisation at Work reveals individualisation to become an ideological and ambiguous process of liberation, as conditions of marketisation and corporatisation transform the emancipatory qualities and motivations that define individualisation into a means for the coordination and reproduction of systemic imperatives, which are realised by individuals' qualities and capacities for self-realisation. A rigorous theoretical study, illustrated with interview material gathered amongst managers from internationally operating corporations, this book will appeal to sociologists with interests in work and organisations and the theory of contemporary modernity.

Power-Sharing Pacts and the Women, Peace and Security Agenda Siobhan Byrne, Allison McCulloch, 2021-11-29 This book offers a comparative lens on the contested relationship between two leading conflict resolution norms: ethno-political power sharing pacts and the women, peace, and security (WPS) agenda. Championed by national governments and international organizations over the last two decades, power sharing and feminist scholars and practitioners tend to view them as opposing norms. Critics charge that power sharing scholars cast gender as an inconsequential political identity that does not motivate people like ethnonationalism From a feminist perspective such thinking serves the interests of ethnicized elites while excluding women and other marginalized communities from key sites of political power This edited volume takes a different tack while recognizing the gender gaps that still exist in power sharing theory and practice contributors also emphasize the constructive engagements that can be built between ethnopolitical power sharing and gender inclusion Three main themes are highlighted The gender silences of existing power sharing arrangements The impact of gender activism and advocacy on the negotiation and implementation of power sharing pacts in divided societies The opportunities for linkages between power sharing and the women peace and security agenda The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal Nationalism and Ethnic Politics

Consumer Vulnerability and Welfare in Mortgage Contracts Irina Domurath, 2017-11-30 This book advocates a new way of thinking about mortgage contracts This claim is based on the assumption that we currently live in a political economy in which consumer debt fulfils a social function In the field of housing this is evidenced by the expansion of mortgage credit through which consumers are to purchase residential property as a means of social inclusion and personal welfare It is suggested that contract law needs to adjust to this new social function in order to avoid welfare losses in terms of default over indebtedness and possibly eviction To this end this book analyses theoretical contract law frameworks and makes concrete proposals for contract law in the EU legal order
