The History of Ancient Education Samuel G. Williams, 2015-06-16 Excerpt from The History of Ancient Education An Account of the Course of Educational Opinion and Practice From the Earliest Periods of Which We Have Reliable Records to the Revival of Learning This book grew out of the lectures given by the author in Cornell University and comprises the first half of his course on the history of education It is believed that it will meet with the same favor so generously accorded to his History of Modern Education About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

The History of Ancient Education Samuel Gardner Williams, 1903 Ancient Education and Its Meaning to Us J. F. Dobson, 2022-06-14 WHAT is the true object of education Should the educator aim at training the largest possible number of individuals to be of the greatest possible service to the State up to the limit of the capability of each or should he rather try to give each one an opportunity to develop fully the best qualities which he possesses regardless of whether this method of training may or may not seem to be of immediate practical use either to the person or to the community The question in most ages and most countries does not admit of a simple answer It came nearest to being answered in Sparta which of all nations known to history paid least attention to the individual as such and in Republican Rome which though not so rigid as Sparta regarded education as concerned mainly with the production of useful citizens In Rome at least before the great development which followed on the introduction of Greek ideas and in Sparta throughout her history this social side of education was predominant In other Greek states there was at all times more of individualism The Ionians of Asia Minor represent the extreme of the opposite attitude and even democratic Athens did not wish to have all her citizens turned out of the same mould but while giving equal opportunities to all neither expected nor wished that everyone should follow the same line or reach the same goal Plato for instance who was deeply influenced by Spartan ideals attached the highest importance to the State and though in his Republic he would have the individuals highly trained in many branches of learning which in Sparta or early Rome would have been rejected as either superfluous or harmful it has been often pointed out that the individuals in his State pass a laborious life of service and self sacrifice in order to assure the greatest happiness to the greatest number while his strictures on poetry and other imitative arts shew

The History of Ancient Education Samuel G. Williams, 2017-12-26 Excerpt from The History of Ancient Education An Account of the Course of Educational Opinion and Practice From the Earliest Periods of Which We Have Reliable Records to the Revival of Learning I propose to discuss the history of educational efforts and educational ideas among those peoples with which our own progress is most intimately connected from the earliest periods of which we have any reliable records down to the times in which we ourselves are actors This is a most interesting and suggestive branch of historic study since it not only reveals to us the efforts of the historic races at various epochs to fit their offspring to fill successfully the places they were destined in the course of nature to occupy in society and in the State but also brings us into the most vital contact with the controlling ideas of these races with their ideals of life and conduct with their views of human progress human perfection and human destiny About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Education at the Intersection of Globalization and Technology Sharon Waller, Lee Waller, Vongai Mpofo, Mercy Kurebwa, 2021-04-07 Today s educators stand at the crossroads of globalization and technology The world is rapidly shrinking The workplace is being transformed before our very eyes Technology is forever changing the way we perceive reality and the way we do business Educators are required to equip students for a workplace that has yet to emerge The skill sets of today s job market are often obsolete before students can enter the workplace Now is the time for educators to rise to the challenges of our modern world By embracing the vision of yesterday s practitioners and joining hands with tomorrow s practitioners educators can transform our world and equip their students for the upward mobility and career flexibility required in tomorrow s workplace
