Colonizing Nature Beth Fowkes Tobin, 2011-06-07 With its control of sugar plantations in the Caribbean and tea cotton and indigo production in India Britain in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries dominated the global economy of tropical agriculture In Colonizing Nature Beth Fowkes Tobin shows how dominion over the tropics as both a region and an idea became central to the way in which Britons imagined their role in the world Tobin examines georgic poetry landscape portraiture natural history writing and botanical prints produced by Britons in the Caribbean the South Pacific and India to uncover how each played a crucial role in developing the belief that the tropics were simultaneously paradisiacal and in need of British intervention and management Her study examines how slave garden portraits denied the horticultural expertise of the slaves how the East India Company hired such artists as William Hodges to paint and thereby Anglicize the landscape and gardens of British controlled India and how writers from Captain James Cook to Sir James E Smith depicted tropical lands and plants Just as mastery of tropical nature and especially its potential for agricultural productivity became key concepts in the formation of British imperial identity Colonizing Nature suggests that intellectual and visual mastery of the tropics through the creation of art and literature accompanied material appropriations of land labor and natural resources Tobin convincingly argues that the depictions of tropical plants gardens and landscapes that circulated in the British imagination provide a key to understanding the forces that shaped the British Empire Conversation Piece Molly

Critical Inquiry: Some Winds on Works □□□, 2009-03-01 Here is a collection of sixteen critical papers which inquire into literary problems found in works of eight British authors Milton Blake Wordsworth Coleridge Shelley Keats Arnold and Graham Greene as well as four American authors Emerson Frost O Neill and Hemingway Each critical inquiry herein is imagined as a wind made up of the critic's breath while an author's work is imagined as an endurable rock on which the wind blows Readers may get wind of the author or the critic and may know how the wind blows and where it lies but they are expected not to expect any wind to change the rock noticeably What we want is merely the readers attention and we hope their own winds will duly come to help keep the world in winds The Beautiful,

Novel, and Strange Ronald Paulson, 2019-12-01 Originally published in 1995 In The Beautiful Novel and Strange Ronald Paulson fills a lacuna in studies of aesthetics at its point of origin in England in the 1700s He shows how aesthetics took off not only from British empiricism but also from such forms of religious heterodoxy as deism The third earl of Shaftesbury the founder of aesthetics replaced the Christian God of rewards and punishments with beauty worship of God with a taste for a work of art William Hogarth reacting against Shaftesbury's disinterestedness replaced his Platonic abstractions with an aesthetics centered on the human body gendered female and based on an epistemology of curiosity pursuit and seduction Paulson shows Hogarth creating first in practice and then in theory a middle area between the Beautiful and the Sublime by adapting Joseph Addison's category in the Spectator of the Novel Uncommon and Strange Paulson retrieves an aesthetics that had strong support during the eighteenth century but has been obscured both by the more dominant academic discourse of Shaftesbury and later Sir Joshua Reynolds and by current trends in art and literary history Arguing that the two traditions comprised not only painterly but also literary theory and practice Paulson explores the innovations of Henry Fielding John Cleland Laurence Sterne and Oliver Goldsmith which followed and complemented the practice in the visual arts of Hogarth and his followers
