Carrington, 2006 The brain drain from developing countries has been lamented for many years but knowledge of the empirical magnitude of the phenomenon is scant owing to the lack of systematic data sources This paper presents estimates of emigration rates from 61 developing countries to OECD countries for three educational categories constructed using 1990 U S Census data Barro and Lee s data set on educational attainment and OECD migration data Although still tentative in many respects these estimates reveal a substantial brain drain from the Caribbean Central America and some African and Asian countries Hollowing Out the Middle Patrick J. Carr, Maria J. Kefalas, 2009-10-01 Two sociologists reveal how small towns in Middle America are exporting their most precious resource young people and share what can be done to save these dwindling communities In 2001 with funding from the MacArthur Foundation sociologists Patrick J Carr and Maria J Kefalas moved to Iowa to understand the rural brain drain and the exodus of young people from America's countryside. They met and followed working class stayers, ambitious and college-bound achievers, seekers who head off to war to see what the world beyond offers, and returners who eventually circle back to their hometowns. What surprised them most was that adults in the community were playing a pivotal part in the town's decline by pushing the best and brightest young people to leave. In a timely new afterword Carr and Kefalas address the question so what can be done to save our communities. They profile the efforts of dedicated community leaders actively resisting the hollowing out of Middle America. These individuals have creatively engaged small town youth stayers and returners, seekers and achievers, and have implemented a variety of programs to combat the rural brain drain. These stories of civic engagement will certainly inspire and encourage readers struggling to defend their communities.

Learner-Centered Theory and Practice in Distance Education Thomas M. Duffy, Jamie R. Kirkley, 2003-12-08. Learner-Centered Theory and Practice in Distance Education: Cases From Higher Education brings the voice of the learning sciences to the study and design of distance learning. The contributors examine critical issues in the design of theoretically and pedagogically based distance education programs. Eight distance education programs are described in enough detail to allow readers with different interests to understand the pedagogical approaches and the implications of implementing those approaches. Issues of theory, pedagogy, design, assessment, communities of practice, collaboration, and faculty development are discussed. Each section of the book includes a primary chapter written by an author or authors involved with a distance education program that reflects learner-centered principles, a formal reaction to the chapter by a specialist from the learning sciences, educational evaluation, and policy administration, or the corporate sector with expertise in issues of distance learning, and an edited transcript of the authors' discussion of the primary chapter held at a symposium at the Asilomar Conference Center. A final summing up section offers two perspectives from leading scholars outside the fields of instructional design, evaluation, and the learning sciences on the approaches and thinking reflected in the rest of the book. This book is essential for researchers as well as all those engaged in delivering, supporting, or administering distance education programs at the post-secondary level. The descriptions, strategies, and principles will inform the design of continuing education as well as degree-based education and corporate education and training and distance education programs for adults.
