Comprehensive Peace Education Educating For Global Responsibility:

Comprehensive Peace Education Betty Reardon, 2021-09-21 Betty A Reardon's groundbreaking work originally authored in 1988 provides one of the first and clearest articulations of the field of peace education in theory and practice. Through reflection on her own experiences, Reardon assesses the state of peace education and offers a new comprehensive approach. She addresses the need to help educators and citizens alike understand what peace education is, why it is needed, and how it is and should be pursued. She investigates the root causes of the violent conditions facing society so that we can better understand how education can be used to interrupt the cycles of violence and create the conditions for sustainable peace and justice. Comprehensive peace education, for the author, takes place at every level and in every subject area of both formal and non-formal education. In this special 2021 Edition, Reardon provides a new reflective introduction on the emerging needs and challenges to the field for the 21st century. Formal and non-formal educators, theorists, students, and activists will find practical and transformative wisdom immediately applicable to diverse conditions and contexts in Comprehensive Peace Education. Betty A Reardon is acknowledged around the world as one of the founders of the field of peace education. She has been extensively involved in the international peace education movement and has been published widely in the field. She is a co-founder of both the International Institute on Peace Education and the Global Campaign for Peace Education.

Comprehensive Peace Education Betty Reardon, 1988-01-01 Peace Education B. Jeannie Lum, 2018-04-19 In 1999 the UN instituted the Program of Action on a Culture of Peace, leading to the Declaration of the International Decade for the Promotion of a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010. This represented a paradigm shift away from the prevailing conceptualization of peace as the absence of war to one of creating cultures of peace and indicated a significant opening for peace educators and the expansion of their mission and field in peace research and scholarship. This book seeks to address several questions about the emergence, present state, and future of the field of peace education and to ground the definition of the discipline in its origins, origins deeply set in informal grassroots movements of concerned citizens, faith-based communities, and professional organizations who work for peace, as well as those working in formal institutions. These origins are vital in imparting identity and in nurturing the current growing collective consciousness that combines the academic discipline and the worldwide peace movement, a collective that can unify and inspire dialogue among scholars, researchers, activists, educators, government leaders, and the myriad of individuals committed to creating cultures of peace throughout the world. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Peace Education. Critical Peace Education and Global Citizenship Rita Verma, 2017-03-16 Critical Peace Education and Global Citizenship offers narrative accounts representing multiple ways teachers and learner-activists have come to realize possibilities for peace and reconciliation through unofficial curricula. With these narratives, the book demonstrates the connections between critical peace education and such crucial issues as human trafficking, gang violence, contested narratives of nationhood, and belonging gender identities and the significance of mentoring Through rich examples of pedagogic work this volume enhances and illustrates critically oriented understandings and interpretations of peace in real classrooms with diverse populations of students Written primarily for scholars and graduate students working in the fields of educational theory critical pedagogy and educational policy the chapters in this book tell a compelling story about teachers learners and scholar activists who continue to struggle for the creation of transformative and meaningful sites for peace praxis
