Jr. Martinez, 2012-12-02 Learning and Memory A Biological View is a comprehensive textbook about the neurobiology of learning and memory Topics covered include developmental approaches to the memory process anatomical correlates of neuronal plasticity drugs that modulate learning and memory and biochemical correlates of learning and memory The link between aging and memory is also discussed along with electrophysiological approaches to the study of memory Comprised of 12 chapters this book begins with a review of historical traditions that influenced research on the biological basis of learning and memory Experimental findings suggesting that the engram for a simple classically conditioned skeletal response may be in the cerebellum are also presented The next chapter emphasizes the importance of anatomical mechanisms that could mediate learning plasticity and memory storage in young and adult animals Subsequent chapters explore the influence of peripheral hormones and particularly opioid peptides on complex behavior such as learning and memory the contribution of individual neurotransmitter systems to learning the psychopathology of aging and long term potentiation as a model of the way the central nervous system stores information Learning in complex vertebrate systems and direct stimulation of various brain nuclei are also examined The final chapter presents a neurobehavioral analysis of the structure of memory formation that utilizes lesions and explores human memory pathology This monograph is intended for advanced undergraduate students graduate students and research workers in the field of memory

Learning About Objects in Infancy Amy Work Needham, 2016-03-17 How do young infants experience the world around them How similar or different are infants experiences from adults experiences of similar situations How do infants progress from relatively sparse knowledge and expectations early in life to much more elaborate knowledge and expectations just several months later We know that much of infants learning before four to five months of age is visually based As they develop the ability to reach for objects independently they can explore objects that are of particular interest to them a new skill that must be important for their learning Through this transition to independent reaching and exploration infants go a long way toward forming their own understandings of the objects around them Towards the end of the first year of life infants begin manipulating one object relative to another and this skill sets the stage for them to begin using objects instrumentally using one object to create changes in other objects This new ability opens up many opportunities for infants to learn about using tools In this volume Amy Work Needham provides an extensive overview of her research on infant learning with a particular focus on how infants learn about objects She begins with an explanation of how basic aspects of how infants visual exploration of objects allows them to create new knowledge about objects and object categories She continues with a description of infants visual and manual learning about hand held tools and how these tools can be used to achieve goals Throughout she focuses on active learning and development which results in infants making important contributions to their own learning about objects She concludes by synthesizing the findings discussed pulls out recurring themes across studies and brings together fundamental principles of how infants learn about objects Perceptual Learning Manfred Fahle, Tomaso Poggio, 2002 Perceptual learning is the specific and relatively permanent modification of perception and behaviour following sensory experience This book presents advances made during the 1990s in this rapidly growing field difficulties in psychosis have been investigated using an array of different methodologies including novel experimental tasks narrative assessments self report measures as well as neuroscientific and computational methods These studies have primarily examined how mentalizing disturbances relate to symptom dimensions and functional outcomes in clinical samples as well as the transition to clinical psychosis among those who are at increased risk More recently clinical adaptations of mentalization based treatments MBT and other psychotherapeutic approaches with a focus on supporting people suffering with psychosis reflect on their own and others mental states such as Metacognitive Reflection and Insight Therapy MERIT have been reported in the literature
