Archiving Society:

Achieving Society David C. McClelland, 1961 This book provides a factual basis for evaluating economic historical and sociological theories that explain the rise and fall of civilizations The Achieving Society Prof. David C. McClelland, 2016-11-11 Harvard University Professor David C. McClelland is chiefly known for his work on achievement motivation but his research interests extended to personality and consciousness He pioneered workplace motivational thinking developing achievement based motivational theory and models and promoted improvements in employee assessment methods advocating competency based assessments and tests arguing them to be better than traditional IQ and personality based tests His ideas have since been widely adopted in many organisations and relate closely to the theory of Frederick Herzberg He is most noted for describing three types of motivational need which he identified in this book The Achieving Society 1 achievement motivation n ach 2 authority power motivation n pow 3 affiliation motivation n affil First published in 1961 his classic book provides a factual basis for evaluating economic historical and sociological theories that explain the rise and fall of civilizations The Achieving Society David Clarence McClelland, 1967 Ambition Eckart Goebel, 2022-06-02 We describe people who are consumed or devoured by ambition as if by a predator or an out of control inferno Thinkers since deepest antiquity have raised these questions approaching the subject of ambition with ambivalence and often trepidation as when the ancient Greek poet Hesiod proposed a differentiation between the good and the bad goddess Eris Indeed ambition as a longing for immortal fame seems to be one of the unique hallmarks of the human species While philosophy has touched only occasionally on the problem of burning ambition sociology psychoanalysis and world literature have provided rich and more revealing descriptions and examples of its shaping role in human history Drawing on a long and varied tradition of writing on this topic ranging from the works of Homer through Shakespeare Freud and Kafka and from the history of ancient Greece and Rome to the Italian Renaissance and up to the present day to modernity and the current neoliberal era Eckart Goebel explores our driving passion for recognition that insatiable hunter in the mirror and power The Achieving Society David C. McClelland, 2009 Examines the motivation for achievement as a psychological factor that shapes economic development Refuting arguments based on race climate or population growth the book instead argues for cultural customs and motivations especially the motivation for achievement as the major catalysts of economic growth Considering the Protestant Reformation the rise of capitalism parents influences on sons and folklore and children s stories as shaping cultural motivations for achievement the book hypothesizes that a high level of achievement motivation precedes economic growth This is supported through qualitative analysis of the achievement motive as well as of other psychological factors including entrepreneurial behavior and characteristics and available sources of achievement in past and present highly achieving societies It is the achievement motive and not merely the profit motive or the desire for material gain that has advanced societies economically Consequently individuals are not merely products of their environment as many social scientists have asserted but also creators of the environment as they manipulate it in various ways in the search for achievement Finally a plan is hypothesized to accelerate economic growth in developing countries by encouraging and supplementing their achievement motives through mobilizing the greater achievement resources of developed countries The conclusion is not just that motivations shape economic progress but that current influences on future people s motivations and values will determine economic growth in the long run Thus it is most beneficial for a society to concentrate its resources on creating an environment conducive to entrepreneurship and a strong ideological base for achievement CJC The Scientific View of Sport O. Grupe,D. Kurz,M.
