

Transfer of Development Rights (TDR)

Sending Zone

We should not build here, because it has environmental value and lacks infrastructure.

BEFORE

Receiving Zone

We should build here, because it is an already-developed area.

AFTER - WITH TDR

Development Rights are Restricted

The right to develop has been restricted via a protection mechanism (e.g., restrictive covenant). The owner often maintains the right to use the land for specific purposes.

Development Rights are Increased

A common benefit to TDR programs is that the receiving parcel gains additional development rights (e.g., increased height and/or density).

AFTER - WITHOUT TDR

Fragmentation of Open Space

Development of open space can encourage sprawl if infrastructure is brought to the area. Moreover, fragmentation of open space can reduce the environmental value of the area.

Inefficient Use of Developable Land

Without an increase in the development rights, developers are not fully incentivized to maximize the use of the land. This can lead to developments that do not maximize the value of the land.

Purchase of Development Rights and the Economics of Easements, 1995      Institutional Diversity in Transferring Land Development Rights in China Chen Shi, 2025-12-16 This book aims to elucidate the operational mechanisms of transfer of land development right within a public ownership system which not only offers a distinctive and dynamic case study on TDR program to advance institutional diversity in transitional economies but also serves as a valuable reference for addressing urban rural development disparities worldwide      The Committee's Response to Government's Consultation on Permitted Development Rights for Homeowners Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Communities and Local Government Committee, 2012-12-20 The Government's plans to extend planning permission exemptions are based on an inadequate impact assessment warns the CLG Committee in a report published today By failing to take account of the social and environmental effects the same proposals also ignore two essential requirements of the sustainable development policy set out in the National Policy Planning Framework say the MPs The report responds to the Government's consultation on permitted development rights for homeowners published on 12 November https://www.gov.uk/government/uploads/system/uploads/attachment\_data/file/11188/permited.pdf The Government's proposals would double the exemption from planning permission for extensions to certain kinds of housing for a period of three years the size limits for the depth of single storey extensions for detached houses would increase from 4m to 8m and from 3m to 6m for all other houses in non protected areas The Committee found the Government's rationale for these changes unconvincing and asked it to reconsider The Committee also has concerns that the relaxation in the planning rules would be far from temporary      Inventions and Patents, Their Development and Promotion Milton Wright, 1927      Human Rights and Development Siri Gloppen, Lise Rakner, 1993
