Biochemistry Of Development:

The Biochemistry of Development Jean Brachet, 1964
Brachet, 2014-05-17 The Biochemistry of Development focuses on advances in chemical embryology. The book first discusses gametogenesis including the processes of oogenesis and spermatogenesis. The text describes fertilization and related aspects such as physical, morphological, and metabolic changes during fertilization. The selection also underscores the process of cleavage. Concerns include morphology and cytochemistry of dividing eggs, importance of nucleic acids and proteins, formation of the furrow, and biochemistry of cleavage. The text also looks at the chemical embryology of invertebrate eggs. Examinations are done on the eggs of worms, mollusks, sea urchins, and ascidians. The book also evaluates the chemical embryology of vertebrate eggs, RNA and protein metabolism of intact eggs, chemical nature of inducing substances, and physical properties of inducing agents are underscored. The text also offers information on the biochemistry of differentiation and the biochemical interactions between the nucleus and the cytoplasm during morphogenesis. The selection is highly recommended for readers wanting to study chemical embryology.

Endocrine and Biochemical Development of the Fetus and Neonate Jose M. Cuezva, Ana M. Pascual-Leone, Mulchand S. Patel, 2013-08-11 The annual meeting of the Perinatal Biochemical Group of the Spanish Biochemical Society held in Madrid on December 15-16, 1989 provided an excellent opportunity to bring together a group of distinguished investigators both from Spain and from abroad with a common interest in developmental endocrinology and biochemistry. The aim of the symposium was to present and discuss the most recent developments in the areas of endocrine and biochemical processes critical to normal growth and maturation of the newborn. To achieve a high degree of interaction among the participants, subject reviews as well as short communications were included in the program. The reviews provided in-depth information on selected important topics. The purpose of short communications was two-fold: i) to provide a forum to discuss ongoing investigations on related areas and ii) to present opportunities for active participation by young investigators. This format proved very successful in generating fruitful discussions among the participants. Taken together, the review chapters and the short communications have resulted in a coherent and unified subject presentation.

Advances in biochemistry, molecular biology, and cell biology have provided not only new and exciting experimental approaches but also have opened up new directions in the investigation of differentiation and developmental processes at cellular, molecular, and biochemical levels during the early stages of growth and maturation. In recent years, a wealth of information in these areas of development has emerged at a rapid rate.

The Biochemistry of Development Philip F. Benson, 1971
Advances in Developmental Biochemistry Paul Wassarman, 1995-04-05 Volume 3 of Advances in Developmental Biology and Biochemistry consists of five chapters that review specific aspects of mammalian and fly development. In Chapter 1, D. Chapman and D. Wolgemuth discuss the role of protein kinases, especially tyrosine and serine/threonine kinases, in regulating cell cycle events during mammalian gametogenesis. In Chapter 2, M. Lundell and J.

Hirsh discuss the regulation of the DOPA decarboxylase gene during Drosophila development DO PA decarboxylase is a key enzyme in biogenic amine biosynthesis and its expression is subject to both transcriptional and post transcriptional regulation In Chapter 3 S Potter discusses the role of homeobox genes as master switches determining the developmental destinies of groups of cells during murine development In Chapter 4 G Cooper discusses the expression and function of the c mos proto oncogene in mammalian germ cells where it plays a central role in regulating the meiotic cell cycle In Chapter 5 F Beermann R Gan and G Sch tz discuss the regulation of pigmentation during mammalian development with emphasis on the production of melanin in mouse melanocytes
