Do Economists Make Markets? Donald MacKenzie, Fabian Muniesa, Siu Leung-Sea, 2020-06-30 Around the globe economists affect markets by saying what markets are doing what they should do and what they will do Increasingly experimental economists are even designing real world markets But despite these facts economists are still largely thought of as scientists who merely observe markets from the outside like astronomers look at the stars Do Economists Make Markets boldly challenges this view It is the first book dedicated to the controversial question of whether economics is performative of whether in some cases economics actually produces the phenomena it analyzes The book s case studies including financial derivatives markets telecommunications frequency auctions and individual transferable quotas in fisheries give substance to the notion of the performativity of economics in an accessible nontechnical way Some chapters defend the notion others attack it vigorously The book ends with an extended chapter in which Michel Callon the idea's main formulator reflects upon the debate and asks what it means to say economics is performative The book's insights and strong claims about the ways economics is entangled with the markets it studies should interest and provoke economic sociologists economists and other social scientists In addition to the editors and Callon the contributors include Marie France Garcia Parpet Francesco Guala Emmanuel Didier Philip Mirowski Edward Nik Khah Petter Holm Vincent Antonin L pinay and Timothy Mitchell
