WITH COLOR-CODED CATEGORIES

Condemning an argument because of where it began, how it began, or who began it.	Attacking an opponent's character or his motives for believing something instead of discerning his argument.	Using a double standard or arguing for an unqualified exception.
Changing or exaggerating an opponent's position to make it easier to refute.	Claiming your opponent is correct just because many other people agree with it.	Appealing to the authority of someone who has no special knowledge in the area he is discussing.

Blaming another person or group for a problem because the problem is troublesome in that very thing.	Arguing as if the something only because we are someone or we are doing something else.

Asking one question when someone has answered for another question.	Changing the meaning of a word in the middle of an argument.	Attempting to prove a conclusion by simply restating it.
---	--	--

Urging us to love something because it is the "best thing" - but not necessarily because it is the best thing.	Encouraging us to love a product or do something because it is associated with something we love.	Encouraging us to love someone's product because it is better than or make us stand out from everybody else.	Urging us to transfer our good or best feelings about one thing to another unrelated thing.

Arguing that if one thing is true then another thing must be true.	Asking one question when someone has answered for another question.	Changing the meaning of a word in the middle of an argument.	Attempting to prove a conclusion by simply restating it.
