Individual Development and Social Change John R. Nesselrode, Alexander von Eye, 1985 Individual Development and Social Change Explanatory Analysis represents a convergence of three lines of emphasis now visible in developmental research and theory building The three are 1 the life course as a focus for the study of development and social change and their interrelationships 2 the life span orientation to the study of individual development with its acknowledgment of the salience of contextual features for understanding development and 3 the growth of methodological innovations that provide more appropriate and powerful ways of exploiting data gathered to describe an Change, Intervention and Consequence Tom Douglas, 1997 Trying to change human behaviour is an increasingly widespread phenomena A change industry has developed with beneficial objectives and strong moral standards but which uses processes that are to a large extent accepted as articles of faith This text examines what intentional change processes essentially are and places them in them in relation to the natural development of human change and to the question of consequences

Lessons from Growth and Structural Change in the Second-tier South East Asian Newly Industrializing Countries Jomo Kwame Sundaram, 1996 Changing Urban Education Clarence Nathan Stone, 1998 With critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high Teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching Though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action This book tells why Changing Urban Education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts Edited by one of the nation's leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities Much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education The contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas Presenting case studies of original field research in Baltimore Chicago Houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players By demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars It also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved Changing Urban Education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix While its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future
