Under Fire Elizabeth Goodenough, Andrea Immel, 2008 Under Fire is an eclectic multidisciplinary collection that explores the representation of war and its aftereffects in children s books and documentary film This richly illustrated volume brings together internationally known contributors to examine the ongoing influence of violence and war on children s literature by studying the childhood experiences of authors writing for children the children represented in war stories and the experiences of children who make up the stories readership Under Fire opens timely avenues in literary studies and encourages those who work with young readers to envision children s studies in new ways The first three sections explore war s effect on children from the Children s Crusade through World War II with a special emphasis on the Holocaust Contributors in these sections pay close attention to the effects of war on the collective memory and consciousness of both children and authors investigating how these experiences serve as fodder for fantasy and as a justification for the abundance of realism in children's books. The final section studies in detail children's books and stories from the world renowned Cotsen Collection at Princeton University including C. S. Lewis's Chronicles of Narnia series and J. K. Rowling's Harry Potter series. Dedicated to the memory of Mitzi Myers, Under Fire concludes with a personal essay by Myers who considers the unexpected and long reaching effects of children's literature on her own life. Under Fire helps readers to understand why matters of life and death have always been at the heart of enduring works for children. Children's studies scholars and students and teachers of children's literature will appreciate this multifaceted and intriguing volume.

Children and War Helga Embacher, 2013. The amount of international research on Children and War carried out by academics, governments and non governmental organizations has continually increased in recent years. At the same time there has been growing public interest in how children experience military conflicts and how their lives have been affected by war and its aftermath. In light of the many brutal post colonialist civil wars or new wars especially in Africa and Asia, child soldiers have in particular gained increased attention. Simultaneously since the 1990s the history of the Holocaust and World War II has also increasingly been written from the perspective of children, those who speak out now and publish their memoirs experienced the Holocaust as children. A similar generational change has also taken place in the societies of the perpetrators, Germans and Austrians who experienced the war as children, took over the role of war witnesses from the soldiers of the German Wehrmacht. Moreover, intensified focus on children's experiences and their strategies for dealing with what they went through is evident in Eastern Europe as well. In Children and War: Past and Present, scholars from different academic disciplines, practitioners in the field and representatives of government and non governmental institutions approach this sensitive subject from different angles and in various methodological ways. The book shows how children expressed their experiences in letters, memoirs and diaries during and after World War I and World War II and how children remembered those wars. Many of the authors also deal with various long term psychological effects. Using the example of children's literature in World War I and the representation of child survivors in the postwar cinema, another focus of the book is on the representation of children in different wars. Based on post colonial and contemporary wars in Africa, images of girl and boy soldiers created by the media, NGOs and governments as well as trends in how they are represented in contemporary research are also discussed. The last section of the book concentrates on various institutions such as welfare organizations and NGOs dealing with children in different wars. How have institutions supported children? And concerning contemporary conflicts, how does the international community face the question of international justice and adapt to children's needs?

Children of War Jo Boyden, Sara Gibbs, 1997. Examines the relationship between conflict and psycho social distress, how children, their families and communities are affected by war and social upheaval and the appropriateness of national and international responses to psycho social problems.
