

COSMIC LATTE

a 1-player journaling worldbuilding game by
Pearse Anderson

WHO IS ORDERING STELLAR DRINKS?

In 2003, fancy astronomers Ivan Baldry and Karl Glazebrook determined that the average color of the universe was a beige-tinted white. By averaging all galaxies, stars, and celestial bodies, this color was discovered and labeled "Cosmic Latte."

Little did humans know, this Cosmic Latte is a metauniversal standard that must be maintained by a cadre of cosmological baristas. These baristas are managed by higher-class Celestial creatures who order new planets to be created as fast as drinks, without much care or customization put into their orders. After millennia of this, the baristas are demanding better.

In Cosmic Latte, you play as planet-spawning cosmic baristas trying to unionize your workplace.

HOW DO I PLAY THE GAME?

Each round begins with a new planet color, chosen to maintain the Cosmic Latte. Start a timer for 87 seconds, the Celestial-mandated time chosen to create an entire planet, and begin by recording your planet's name, color, and a short paragraph about its nature, society, and unique traits. Incorporate any additional Mandates into this description. Sentences do not have to be grammatical. When the timer goes off, you must stop journaling and hand over the planet to Celestials. Another stressful day at work has gone by.

Roll a d6, adding the result to your unionization meter and consulting the win conditions if the meter has surpassed 21.

Then, check if your planet's description skipped any Mandates. If you skipped any, the Celestials destroy the baristas and start from scratch, ending the game and resetting your unionization meter. If you met all Mandates, check that d6. If 1 was even, add the next Mandate on the wheel to your required Mandates for next round.

Rotate to the next planet color to begin a next round. Mandates will begin to stack.

You can play Cosmic Latte solo, or in a group, rolling 1 unionization die and collectively and only being destroyed if every player loses a mandate during a round. Strength comes with solidarity for coworkers, wins come from unionization.

Necessary for play

- Timer that can input seconds and be obnoxious when alarmed
- Journaling space (notebook, napkin, .docx)
- Journaling materials (pen, pencil, keyboard)
- This sheet and a six-sided die.

Terms to understand:

- Round - a day in the life of metauniversal baristas that covers the creation of 1 planet.
- Mandate - a demand ordered by higher-ups. Must be met or the baristas are destroyed.
- Celestials - the beings that control all of space/time and deny people's paid lunch. Cowards known for unfair labor practices.

Things to journal about:

- Planet Name
- Planet Color
- Planet Type (Resource, Home, Frontier, Damaged, Unexplored, something else?)
- Planet Description (Biomes, Societies, Economics, Size, Mysteries, and more!)

UNIONIZATION METER

Must get to 21 for bargaining unit recognition

/ 21

Get to 21 by 6 planets to win without firings

Get to 21 by 7 planets to win without heavy celestial malfeasance

Get to 21 by 8 planets to win without having a pyrrhic victory

Get to 21 by 9+ planets to win, barely.
