Abstract

We examined young readers' comprehension as a function of text genre (narrative, science), text cohesion (high, low), and readers' abilities (reading decoding skills and world knowledge). The overarching purpose of this study was to contribute to our understanding of the fourth grade slump. Children in grade 4 read four texts, including one high and one low cohesion text from each genre. Comprehension of each text was assessed with 12 multiple-choice questions and free and cued recall. Comprehension was enhanced by increased knowledge; high knowledge readers showed better comprehension than low knowledge readers and narratives were comprehended better than science texts. Interactions between readers' knowledge levels and text characteristics indicated that the children showed larger effects of knowledge for science than for narrative texts, and those with more knowledge better understood the low cohesion, narrative texts, showing a reverse cohesion effect. Decoding skill benefited comprehension, but effects of text genre and cohesion depended less on decoding skill than prior knowledge. Overall, the study indicates that the fourth grade slump is at least partially attributable to the emergence of complex dependencies between the nature of the text and the reader's prior knowledge. The results also suggested that simply adding cohesion cues, and not explanatory information, is not likely to be sufficient for young readers as an approach to improving comprehension of challenging texts.

Keywords: Comprehension, fourth grade slump, cohesion, genre, domain knowledge, reading, individual differences, coherence, construction integration

Cognitive Models and Intelligent Environments for Learning Programming Enrica Lemut,Benedict DuBoulay,Giuliana Dettori,2013-11-11 At present there is a general consensus on the nature of learning programming but there are different opinions on what forms an effective environment for it It is generally recognized that the development of a mental model is a formidable task for the student and that learning programming is a complex activity that depends heavily on metacognitive skills This book based on a NATO workshop presents both pure cognitive models and experimental learning environments and discusses what characteristics can make a learning model effective especially in relation to the learning environment natural or computerized The papers cover cognitive models related to different aspects of programming classes of learners and types of environment and are organized in three groups theoretical and empirical studies on understanding programming environments for learning programming and learning programming in school environments Comprehension design construction testing debugging and verification are recognized as interdependent skills which require complicated analysis and may develop independently and indifferent orders in novices This book shows that there is unlikely to be a single path from novice to expert and that the structure of the final product the program may not constrain the process by which it comes into being as much as some would advocate Acoustics in the Built
