Guidelines for Sensory Analysis in Food Product Development and Quality Control Roland P. Carpenter,David H. Lyon,Terry A. Hasdell,2012-12-06 Sensory testing has been in existence ever since man started to use his senses to judge the quality and safety of drinking water and foodstuffs With the onset of trading there were several developments that led to more formalized testing involving professional tasters and grading systems Many of these grading systems are still in existence today and continue to serve a useful purpose for example in assessing tea coffee and wines However there has also been a growing need for methods for well repli cated objective unbiased sensory assessment which can be applied rou tinely across a wide range of foods Sensory analysis seeks to satisfy this need Sensory analysis is not new to the food industry but its application as a basic tool in food product development and quality control has not always been given the recognition and acceptance it deserves This we believe is largely due to the lack of understanding about what sensory analysis can offer in product research development and marketing and a fear that the discipline is too scientific to be practical To some extent sensory scientists have perpetuated this fear by failing to recognize the industrial constraints to implementing sensory testing procedures These Guidelines are an attempt to redress the balance Encyclopedia of Food Science and Technology ,1991 Processed Prepared Food

,1983 Louisiana Agriculture ,2017 Sensory Evaluation of Food Hildegarde Heymann,Harry T.

Lawless,2013-11-08 The field of sensory evaluation has matured in the last half century to become a recognized discipline in the food and consumer sciences and an important part of the foods and consumer products industries Sensory professionals enjoy widespread recognition for the important services they provide in new product development basic research ingredient and process modification cost reduction quality maintenance and product optimization These services enhance the informational support for management decisions lowering the risk that accompanies the decision making process From the consumers perspective a sensory testing program in a food or consumer products company helps ensure that products reach the market with not only good concepts but also with desirable sensory attributes that meet their expectations Sensory professionals have advanced well beyond the stage when they were simply called on to execute taste tests and to provide statistical summaries of results They are now frequently asked to participate in the decision process itself to draw reasoned conclusions based on data and to make recommendations They are also expected to be well versed in an increasingly sophisticated battery of test methods and statistical procedures including multivariate analyses As always sensory professionals also need to understand people for people are the measuring instruments that provide the basic sensory data People are notoriously variable and difficult to calibrate presenting the sensory specialist with many additional measurement problems that are not present in instrumental methods Viewpoints and Controversies in
