

Black American perceptions of Black Africans

Michael C. Thornton and Robert J. Taylor
Cornell University and University of Michigan

Black Americans, like other ethnic entities in the US are believed to have a special connection with their ancestral homeland. The evidence for this characterization can be seen in black Americans referring to themselves as African American, and in African cultural survivals in the US (Nobles, 1981; Sudarkasa, 1981). Nevertheless, the little quantitative evidence available provides contradictory information on black American affiliative ties with Africans. Case studies indicate a tenuous relationship between black Americans and Africans. For example, Isaacs (1963) found that prominent black Americans were ashamed of their ancestral homeland and had no basis to establish close ties with Africa. Other investigators found that black students had no special interest in Africa or African affairs (Reid, 1972; Davis et al., 1961; U.S. Advisory Commission on International and Cultural Affairs, 1966).

Studies using small or nonrepresentative samples indicate a close and/or a special connection between blacks in Africa and in the US: Laosebikan (1972) found that among black Americans positive attitudes toward Africans ranked second out of thirty ethnic groups surveyed. Krystall and associates (1970) described black students as having intense positive feelings towards Africa, although middle class respondents' views were tempered by a concern with how those feelings might hamper their entering the mainstream. In a study of fifty black and African students, Moikobu (1981) described individuals who felt it was important to identify with Africans, who said they had much in common with Africans and who wished to study or live in Africa if the opportunity arose. A survey of black American interest in South Africa revealed that blacks had a greater interest in Africa-South Africa than did any other ethnic group (Baker et al., 1979; Fierce, 1982).

As the above literature review indicates, black American affinity with Africa may be portrayed as a mixture of pride and prejudice. However, conclusions drawn from this research are circumscribed by evidence obtained through case studies, nonrepresentative samples and student populations. Beyond anecdotal evidence there is little known of the attitudes toward Africa of the great majority of black Americans. The extent of that bond with Africans thus remains open to question.

Manpower Resources Division, 1976 Contours of African American Politics John F. Knutson, 2017-07-05 Contours of African American Politics chronicles the systematic study of African American politics and its subsequent recognition as an established field of scholarly inquiry African American politics emanates from the demands of the prolonged struggle for black liberation and empowerment Hence the study of African American politics has sought to track codify and analyze the struggle that has been mounted and to understand the historic and changing political status of African Americans within American society This two volume set presents a selection of scholarship on African American politics as it appeared in The National Political Science Review from its initial launch in 1989 to the spring of 2009 Represented are contributions from some of the leading scholars of African American politics who have helped to establish and sustain the field The volumes are organized around themes that derive from the unfolding real life drama of African American politics and its subsequent scholarly treatment The result is a window into the political efforts that meld the historically disparate strands of black political expressions into a reconstructed and strategically nimble electoral based mass mobilization necessary for optimizing the impact of the African American vote Sections in the volumes also chronicle the evolution of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists as a professional organization The two volumes illuminate a pivotal epoch in black political empowerment and provide a context for the future of black politics

Perception and Prejudice Jon Hurwitz, Mark Peffley, 1998-01-01 Based on one of the most extensive scientific surveys of race ever conducted this book investigates the relationship between racial perceptions and policy choices in America The contributors leading scholars in the fields of public opinion race relations and political behavior clarify and explore images of African Americans that white Americans hold and the complex ways that racial stereotypes shape modern political debates about such issues as affirmative action housing welfare and crime The authors make use of the largest national study of public opinion on racial issues in more than a generation the Race and Politics Study RPS conducted by the Survey Research Center at the University of California The RPS employed methodological improvements made possible by Computer Assisted Telephone Interviewing a technique that enables analysts to combine the internal validity of laboratory experiments with the external validity of probability sampling Taking full advantage of these research methods the authors offer highly nuanced analyses of subjects ranging from the sources of racial stereotypes to the racial policy preferences of Democrats and Republicans to the reasons for resistance to affirmative action Their findings indicate that while crude and explicit forms of racial prejudice may have declined in recent decades racial stereotypes persist among many whites and exert a powerful influence on the ways they view certain public policies
