Runaway Slave Settlements in Cuba Gabino La Rosa Corzo, 2004-07-21 Combining archaeological and historical methods Gabino La Rosa Corzo provides the most detailed and accurate available account of the runaway slave settlements palenques that formed in the inaccessible mountain chains of eastern Cuba from 1737 to 1850 decades before the end of slavery on the island The traces that remain of these communities provide important clues to historical processes such as slave resistance and emancipation anticolonial insurgency and the emergence of a free peasantry Some of the communities developed into thriving towns that still exist today La Rosa challenges the claims of previous scholars and demonstrates how romanticized the communities have become in historical memory In part by using detailed maps drawn on site La Rosa shows that palenques were smaller and fewer in number than previously thought and they contained mostly local rather than long distance fugitives In addition the residents were less aggressive and violent than myth holds often preferring to flee rather than fight a system of oppression that was even more effective and organized than generally supposed La Rosa's study illuminates many social and economic issues related to the African diaspora in the Caribbean with particular focus on slavery resistance and independence This translation makes the book available in English for the first time      The Travels of Théophile Gautier Théophile Gautier, 1912      The Complete Works: Captain Fracasse, pt. 3.
