Bernadette M. Fitzgibbon, Jamie Ward

Action In Perception:

Action in Perception Alva Noë, 2004 An argument that perception is something we do not something that happens to us not a process in the brain but a skillful bodily activity

What can we make of theories of embodiment and the role of the human mirror neuron system? Analia Arevalo, Juliana Baldo, Fernando González-Perilli, Agustin Ibanez, 2016-03-09 In recent years work surrounding theories of embodiment and the role of the putative mirror neuron system MNS in humans has gained considerable attention If humans have developed a network of neurons that fire in response to other beings actions as has been shown in macaques this system could have vast implications for all kinds of cognitive processes unique to humans such as language learning empathy and communication in general The goal of tapping into and understanding such a system is a fascinating yet challenging one One form of embodiment embodied linguistics suggests that the way we process linguistic information is linked to our physical experience of the concept conveyed by each word The interaction between these cognitive systems i e language and motor processing may occur thanks to the firing of neurons making up the MNS The possible interdependence between different cognitive systems has implications for healthy as well as pathological profiles and in fact work in recent years has also explored the role of embodiment and or the MNS in clinical populations such as stroke Parkinson s Disease Alzheimer s Disease and Autism among others Research on embodiment and or the MNS has been approached with a number of different methodologies but the results obtained with these different methodologies have not been entirely consistent generating doubts regarding the theories The question has been raised as to what this line of inquiry can gain from the types of evidence contributed by functional neuroimaging methods carried out with healthy volunteers versus behavioral or lesion symptom mapping methods employed with neurologically compromised individuals Of particular interest are the clinical applications of this line of research If indeed a system exists which reflects a tight link between for example the human language and motor systems then the obvious challenge is to tap into this system to create useful therapies that can provide rehabilitation where damage has occurred This Research Topic brought together work conducted with healthy and patient populations using several behavioral and imaging techniques as well as insightful commentaries and opinion pieces We believe the combined work of the participating authors is an important contribution to this intriguing line of research and an excellent point of reference for future work

From Action to Cognition Claes Von Hofsten, Kerstin Rosander, 2007-10-19 Extensive neurophysiological and neuropsychological evidence show that perception action and cognition are closely related in the brain and develop in parallel to one another Thus perception cognition and social functioning are all anchored in the actions of the child Actions reflect the motives the problems to be solved and the constraints and possibilities of the child s body and sensory motor system The developing brain accumulates experiences which it translates into knowledge used in planning future actions Such knowledge is available because events are governed by rules and regulations The present volume discusses all these aspects of how action and cognition are related in development

Early Development of Body Representations Virginia Slaughter,Celia A. Brownell,2011-10-20 Because we engage with the world and each other through our bodies and bodily movements being able to represent one's own and others bodies is fundamental to human perception cognition and behaviour This edited book brings together for the first time developmental perspectives on the growth of body knowledge in infancy and early childhood and how it intersects with other aspects of perception and cognition The book is organised into three sections addressing the bodily self the bodies of others and integrating self and other Topics include perception and representation of the human form infant imitation understanding biological motion self representation intention understanding action production and perception and children's human figure drawings Each section includes chapters from leading international scholars drawn together by an expert commentary that highlights open questions and directions for future research

The Neural Underpinnings of Vicarious Experience Bernadette M. Fitzgibbon,Jamie Ward,2014-08-27 Everyday we vicariously experience a range of states that we observe in other people we may feel embarrassed when witnessing another making a social faux pas or we may feel sadness when we see a loved one upset In some cases this process appears to be implicit For instance observing pain in others may activate pain related neural processes but without generating an overt feeling of pain In other cases people report a more literal conscious sharing of affective or somatic states and this has sometimes been described as representing an extreme form of empathy By contrast there appear to be some people who are limited in their ability to vicariously experience the states of others This may be the case in several psychiatric neurodevelopmental and personality disorders where deficits in interpersonal understanding are observed such as schizophrenia autism and psychopathy In recent decades neuroscientists have paid significant attention to the understanding of the social brain and the way in which neural processes govern our understanding of other people In this Research Topic we wish to contribute towards this understanding and ask for the submission of manuscripts focusing broadly on the neural underpinnings of vicarious experience This may include theoretical discussion case studies and empirical investigation using behavioural techniques electrophysiology brain stimulation and neuroimaging in both healthy and clinical populations Of specific interest will be the neural correlates of individual differences in traits such as empathy how we distinguish between ourselves and other people and the sensorimotor resonant mechanisms that may allow us to put ourselves in another's shoes
