Akinloyè calls for the development and empowerment of African languages to serve in various domains including the support of basic literacy and daily survival of their users. It propagates ways to empower African languages for African sociocultural and economic development in the twenty-first century. The author productively engages works by linguists and language pedagogues to provide an ardent case for the empowerment of African languages in the renewed era of globalization, the internet, and an emergent Global Africa. It posits and accentuates some of the notable modalities for empowering African languages in specialized domains for national and continental development.
