Two Thousand Witness Empire State Building Award

FEDERAL Governor Alfred E. Smith, President of Empire State, Inc., presiding at the award on Wednesday, October 18th to eighteen builders who had been honored because of their skill and ability in the erection of the Empire State Building said in part: "A little less than seven months ago the site upon which this structure is being placed was a deep hole in the ground. In less than seven months there has sprung upon this the greatest monument in the world due to the ingenuity, ability and craftsmanship of every man taking a part in the construction of the Empire State Building. The Empire State Building, the largest in the world, rises into the sky to a height of eighty-five stories. It can be seen from all parts of Manhattan and as far across Jersey, from Jersey and from Washington."

"It may occur to those who look upon it that there is some great debt of gratitude owing to the large mass of men who during the long hot days of June saw everything they had done in. And the New York Building Congress, created at that time, decided to make some award, some recognition to the master craftsmen in the different trades who were engaged in their work in connection to be made a memorial to them and in recognition to be made a memorial because they have made a substantial contribution to their city, their state and their country. After the building had been completed there still to be a large tablet placed here with the names of those who are awarded so it so that they may have the recognition as a monument not only to themselves during their lifetime in the form of a certificate but down to their children and their children's children and so down through the ages."

Were Represented by L. C. Johnson

In introducing L. C. Johnson, L. C. Johnson said he recalled to your mind that Mr. Johnson stated he represented the State on the building committee named for it in which as many contractors and their families were interested. In addressing the 2,000 workers and employees L. C. Johnson said: "I bring the men who do the work in this as a rule do not desire to look for public recognition. They are usually satisfied and content with the satisfaction of work well performed and a sense of pride that when a piece of work is completed that it is in fact done well there it is only right to feel that some one notices the appreciation and the thanks both of the community and their associates with whom they have worked day in and day out. Such recognition not only serves as encouragement in a spirit of appreciation for the men who have done their work well but also serves as an incentive to the others to try to do a little more than the duty they are placed to do."

"I sought to bring the thanks and appreciation from the State which is proud of all that you men and daughters, I bring you that appreciation and thank officials and for the State. I want to see specialty work and every man who is to be honored and also their families.

Theodore Irving Lee, Chairman of the Committee of Award, introduced Governor Smith. L. C. Johnson, L. C. Johnson presented certificates and gold buttons to the men.

Among the building officers, Mr. Smith then introduced William F. Lamb of Newark, Lamb and Harmon, the architect, who described the work of the present day craftsmen who erected the great cathedral of Empire. "The finished product," said Mr. Lamb "was never the work of an individual but that it is without the cooperation of the workers in the individual trades."

Builds Friendship Says C.

Colonel William A. Stewart of contractors, Stewart Brothers & Co.

"Contracting events have come to a grand finale and in helping together the workers and the builder. In the middle ages the feeling of kinship existed but when we come to our modern times we find ourselves interested in each other's conditions that we have very little time to know the man. This is the meaning we builders have the man. Contracting brings back something we have lost in the modern scheme of building, the contact between employer and employee."

John J. Collins, representing labor, was the one here the honor and distinction of the participation of L. C. Johnson. During the past six years the Building Congress has brought together various architects, builders and labor in the same platform in their representative awards. This makes a new era. Labor is proud of you men and to those who do not today receive certificates be we must not that you may want see in some future building by connecting up to the qualifications impressed on the certificate which are energy, loyalty, cooperation, service, thoroughness, industry, intelligence and reliability. The mutual respect is becoming appreciable. Here in New York 1,000 men have been honored in more than 100 building operations."

STANDARD CHEMICAL BUILDINGS

This colored volume is very compact, most attractively bound and conveniently carried. The appendix has some valuable tables which have no parallel in it. I consider it a most useful book for any business man's library.
