An End To Flight:

An End to Flight Vincent Banville, 2003-07-01 Michael Painter an Irishman teaching in a Catholic Mission School in Nigeria is by temperament and choosing an observer Boredom and the fear of emotional involvement seem always to prevent him from taking a decisive leap And so as the relief planes lift the European doctors teachers and priests out of a country convulsed by a violent Civil War they cannot comprehend Painter remains behind Still in search of something to give meaning to his life Painter is submerged in the conflict as rival armies shuttle back and forth across the enormous battlefield wreaking identical cruelties slaughtering and being slaughtered For Painter as for the starving Biafrans there is no real end to flight In a spare muted style Vincent Banville communicates the horror of Africa at war in a work of extraordinary power and depth this is a timely re issue of a celebrated novel that paints a picture of the beginnings of a struggle that endures to this day Flight ,1923 Operations Research Proceedings 2004 Hein Fleuren, Dick den Hertog, Peter

Kort, 2005-05-20 These proceedings provide information on the most recent advances in operations research and related areas in economics mathematics and computer science contributed by academics and practitioners from around the world

The Evolution of Endothermy - From Patterns to Mechanisms Elias T. Polymeropoulos, Rebecca Oelkrug, Martin Jastroch, 2018-09-14 Metabolic rate is a key ecophysiological factor determining fitness distribution survival and reproductive strategies of organisms The ability to endogenously produce heat and elevate body temperature beyond ambient has far reaching ecological implications The diversity of thermogenic mechanisms and strategies employed throughout the animal kingdom is truly phenomenal and one of the greatest biological mysteries Interestingly even heat producing plants have been characterised Over the last several decades the oversimplified distinction between warm and cold blooded animals has well and truly been put to rest and the terms endo and ectotherm have been established Birds and mammals are regarded as endotherms capable of maintaining high body temperatures within highly precise boundaries On contrary in ectothermic organisms ambient temperature governs body temperature and metabolism encompassing the majority of present day species However it has recently become very clear that this distinction is still not accurate enough to describe the vastness of heat generating mechanisms within endo but also ectotherms Indeed a plethora of ectothermic animals display endogenous as well as behavioural means of temperature control and mechanisms for heat generation There is large diversity in regards to thermoregulatory ability and strategy within endotherms as well with some groups being classified by separate categories such as basoendotherms and mesotherms Considerable interest and efforts has been put into the quest to understand the underlying physiological mechanisms leading and facilitating high metabolic rates and body temperatures of endotherms These mechanisms are far from being exhaustively studied and the evolutionary trajectory leading to high metabolic rates and stable body temperatures is equally vividly debated This discussion includes an array of questions and theories surrounding the presence of endothermy in extinct dinosaurs In addition a lively debate surrounds the evolutionary drivers promoting the establishment of endothermy with clear support of direct or indirect selective benefits Within this Research Topic we plan to compile the latest ideas knowledge and experimental work to elucidate the patterns of the evolution of endothermy and its transition distinction from ectothermy The focus is on key physiological mechanisms supporting this transition and contributing to the maintenance of high metabolic rates and body temperature in endotherms as well as mechanisms for local heterothermy and heat dissipation in ectotherms These mechanisms and conclusions may be derived from different levels of organisation such as population taxon species as well as tissue cellular or molecular levels It may also encompass novel experimental or theoretical models testing evolutionary theories of endothermy A comparative approach is encouraged but not fundamental
