Japan is often characterized as a country which is simultaneously ultra-modern and extremely traditional. Over the course of Japan's history, the country has undergone many upheavals in which contact with foreign cultures and mass adoption of foreign elements has led to a deliberate rethinking of the nature of Japanese culture, yet ancient traditions and beliefs still retain power in the Japan of today. This class will examine the course of Japan's culture from its prehistory to the present day through its history, religion, literature, theater, and art. Through attention to both cultural continuity and cultural change, we will attempt to gain an understanding of Japan and its ability to constantly recreate itself for new circumstances while retaining elements of its earlier self. At the same time, we will look for change within seeming continuity and continuity that underlies times of great change, in order to question the notions of national identity, unchanging tradition, and adaptive brilliance which have characterized stereotypes of Japan, both by the West and by the Japanese themselves.

This course makes extensive use of the University of Michigan's online CTools (formerly CourseTools), both to distribute readings and as a forum for submitting and responding to reaction papers, so becoming comfortable using CTools on a daily basis is vital to your success in this course. You can access CTools using any web browser at <http://ctools.umich.edu>, click on the login button in the upper right hand corner, and login using your University of Michigan username and password. You should see a set of tabs for the courses in which you are enrolled, including one for the lecture section and one for your recitation section of this course. The lecture section can be accessed by students in all recitation sections and will be used to distribute readings and videos, while the recitation sections will be used for online discussion forums for students in each individual recitation. The interface is fairly straightforward, but if you have no experience using the system or are uncomfortable with computers, let the instructor or GSI know immediately and we can help you get started. Sometime before your second recitation section, you should submit a self-introduction as your first posting to the discussion groups. Let me and your classmates know a little bit about yourself and your past experiences, why you are taking this course, and what you hope to get out of the class.

Evaluation will be on the basis of class attendance and participation, online reaction papers and responses, a midterm exam, and a final exam. You can think of the class as divided into two half-terms, with half of your requirements fulfilled in each half and an exam at the end of each one.

Attendance and Participation (In Recitation)			10%
Six Online Reaction Papers	6 x 5%	=	30%
Ten Online Responses	10 x 2%	=	20%
Midterm Exam			20%
Final Exam			20%

Most important, both to your grade and to the success of the class, is keeping up on the readings, being prepared to discuss them in recitation, and regularly posting online. Participation in the online forums makes up fully half of your grade; if you keep up on them it is very difficult to fail, but if you don't keep up it is very difficult to do well. Over the course of the semester you will be required to post at least six
