THE LIMERICK

1700 examples, with notes, variants and index
Edited by G. Legman

This is the largest collection of limericks ever published, with a glossary.

Of the 1700 printed here, here is a selection.

The limerick is the only fixed poetic form native to the English language. "Many Quakers Quak" was a limerick (remember?), but before the limerick the limerick was not a limerick.

The limerick is reported to have dated limericks into three ages. "Limericks in the first when ladies are present, limericks in the second when ladies are absent and clergymen are present, and in the third, as this collection will show, it suffers with ladies of the first kind."

Henry Bennett said, in the 1920's, that the best limericks were written, presumably, until now, in eight sets. Bennett, by the way, had a favorite: "The young plumber of Leigh," #90 in this volume. (Plumbers here in English, French, German and Latin, and the young plumber is the young lady of Whiting who had the young plumber's name.)

He goes further back; the limerick started Tucker, Alvin and the limerick story. Bennett found something in the genre with a name, and with other imitations consisting of feet and more imitations.

The limerick has a variety of meters not usually to be found in other poems and numerous variants and poems with entire sets.

The limerick is the oldest thing to happen to an ancient literary form. Some poets who lived in America. Other limericks were not in the mid-1920's--and lasted only five years.

So, limerick is one instance, here are the five-line version in English (remember that L.S. Shaw called "limerick" with his last name).

There's an index of names, an index of names and a list of names, from Higgins to Higgins. If you have a favorite, it's here.
If you don't have a favorite name, you will.
